SALEM ATHLETE IS COMMENDED

Gregory Declares George King is Honest-to-Goodness Fullback

George King of Salem, fullback on the University of Oregon football team, was characterized as a "real honest-to-goodness fullback" by L. H. Gregory, special football sport writer for the Oregonian in Tuesday morning's edition.

He said: "Speaking of unclaimed football heroes, we nominate for honors a young man who performs his work so unassumingly and with such entire absence of 'grandstanding' that he rarely breaks into headlines—although he is one of the few really outstanding backfield men in the Pacific northwest this year. The player we nominate probably will be more surprised than anybody else, for he is about the last fellow in the world to seek newspaper credit.

"We refer to George King, the University of Oregon fullback. King, to begin with, has a football build. He is one of those solid, stocky fellows, built from his ankles up, relatively short, with big bones and strong muscles, that a coach automatically picks for the battering-ram post of fullback. He has the ball, but, more important yet, knows how to use it. He hits a line beautifully and with such a powerful leg drive to assist his plunge that he often plows a hole for himself when there was no hole.

"Once in that Oregon-O. A. C. game Saturday we saw him nailed on an off-tackle buck by three men—yet those sturdy legs kept digging in and pushing so powerfully that, unaided, he shoved all three of them back for two or three more yards. He was and is just about half the Oregon attacking power on straight football. He is a good interference runner, too, and as secondary defense man is sure death on a runner who penetrates the first line. He played a grand defensive game Saturday and he always does.

"King can stand enormous punishment without showing it. He never gets hurt. In his three years of varsity football we don't recall that he ever even had time taken out for him—except possibly to have some sawdust wiped out of his eye—and he never has been removed from a game because of injury. A real honest-to-goodness fullback—that's George King."

CLEMENCEAU BLAMES AMERICA FOR UNREST

Addresses Veterans

The 16th army, which seats about 10,000, was packed, and the Tiger was given a long ovation as he walked slowly in review before the troops.

After he had placed a wreath on the tablet commemorating the regiment's dead, Clemenceau faced the uniformed men and addressed them "as a man of action to men of action."

Although it was his day of greatest ovation, there came to the Tiger, too, evidences that his tour was not to be wholly over a path of roses. A threatening letter, sharp criticisms from Senator Borah and others in official Washington, and adverse newspaper comment on his revival of the French plea for a triple alliance seemed, however, merely to start the 87-year-old statesman to greater animation.

ALL READY FOR OREGON FEAST

State University Alumni Members Gather at Gray Belle This Evening

Everything but the tables is set for the big Oregon alumni banquet at the Gray Belle tonight, and the tables will be ready in good time.

Reservations had been made last night for 125 guests, and Lyle Bartholomew, director of the feast, expects the number to reach 150 before the dinner call comes at 6:30. A celebration of the recent "break-that-tie" game with O. A. C. is planned.

The Emerald quartet that Prof. John Stark Evans has had under his tutelage for the past three years is to furnish much of the music for the evening, largely prepared for the occasion. George Hopkins, instructor in music, president of the senior class in 1920, is to give some piano numbers. Dr. Keene of Silverton, W. K. Newell, director of the endowment campaign headquarters; Miss Grace Edginton, secretary of the alumni association; Lamar Toole, director of the field work for the endowment, and Lyle Bartholomew, recently president of the student body, will be among the speakers.

A number of towns within easy reach of Salem, including Silverton, Woodburn, Independence, Monmouth and others, will be well represented at the banquet. A permanent organization will be effected, and officers elected to serve for the coming year.

Phonograph Must Go Back, Justice Court Jury Rules

It is usually considered customary when an engagement is broken for the girl to return the young man's diamond ring. But when they simply "break off," as it is necessary that she return a phonograph which she alleges the young man gave her? The jury which heard the case of Harry Hyde vs. Betty Marrow in justice court Tuesday, says "yes."

Betty contended that Harry Hyde had kept company with her for about one year and that to better himself in her eyes he gave her a phonograph worth $60. Later they broke up and Harry wanted his talking machine back. Betty claimed that it was a gift, and that she was entitled to keep it.

But Harry swore that he had just brought the phonograph "over" and that he had never intended that she keep it. For that reason he had demanded and still was demanding its return.

The jury after a short deliberation decided that Betty must return Harry's phonograph.

Does anybody think he chooses his own style of dancing as he chooses his own partner? He is mistaken. It is chosen for him by conclaves of national and international associations of preceptors of the art. Let us hope that, under such instruction, dancers will cease to be contortionists and become artists.

A. R. Hunter, Democratic Candidate for Representative 25th District, Nothing

Senator Hiram Johnson in a recent discussion of war reparations said to a reporter: "Whatever you suggest to Germany, it's too much. She can't do it. And then follow some glib excuses.

"Germany is like the girl whose mother said severely: 'Mabel, last night in the moonlight didn't I see young Mr. Stockton stroking your arm?' " "Sure," said Mabel, yawning. "That's just a habit of his, you know. He used to stroke the Yale varsity crew."

of the governor, however, and there are some clerical jobs there. Many state jobs are board appointments, and the governor does not have absolute power.

Commissions May Change

It has been generally assumed that there will be a change in the industrial accident commission. This is the governor's appointment, with a nominal four years tenure of office, but subject to dismissal by the governor at any time. There are three commissioners that the new governor might operate on, and through them a large office force that could show a startling change in political complexion in a very short time.

The highway department offers some of the most interesting speculations. The non-salaried board is appointed by the governor, and it in turn names all its own help. The technical positions pay the best of all departments in the state service, and it is perhaps the largest department as well. The highway commission it is understood, will be vacated by resignation the first of the year. Chairman Booth tried to resign last spring, being persuaded to stay on only as a duty and not as a matter of personal desire. Chairman Yeon has been publicly credited with a determination to resign, and the removal of Commissioner W. B. Barratt from his eastern Oregon district to Portland, automatically, vacates his place.

The commissioners are honorary offices, and pay no salaries, only expenses, but they control an enormous patronage.

Smaller Appointments Many

The corporation commission, the state insurance department, the state engineering department, are all under the governor's control. The insurance commissioner is also state fire marshal, with several deputyships at command, and state real estate commissioner, with one or two appointments to fill. The bank examiner, named by the banking board, has several field deputies to name.

There are hundreds of smaller appointments on the boards of various kinds. There is the bankers' board, the eugenics board, the livestock sanitary board, and about 50 boards already established; there is yet room for the rat-killers, the ham-boners, the hemlock board, and several others that could be conjured up.

Then there is the bored public. Democrats Expectant

According to the dope during the campaign, it was the Republicans who elected Pierce and the Democrats who tried to cut his throat. There seems to be an overwhelming preponderance of democrat in expectations emanating from the rumor factory, and it seems to be the hope that blood will be thicker than water when the hundreds of readjustments are made in the state service.

Meanwhile, so far as anybody is able to state with authority, Governor-elect Pierce is sitting tight and letting the appointments fight it out at their own sweet will. He expects to visit Salem early in December to see just what all the state-makers have dugged in, hoping he'll swallow it all.
