

NEAR EASTERN CONFLAB GETS PESSIMISTIC

American Insistence of Open Door Policy Affects Calm of Meet

LAUSANNE, Nov. 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—A spirit of uncertainty and a note of pessimism are apparent in the Near East conference, yet the chief delegations have pointed out that the work of the conference was steadily continuing and the various delegates were gradually and helpfully getting a closer understanding of one another's views.

Gloom Apparent
The gloom has been due to a variety of causes, most of which are outside the conference itself. Reports of French precautionary preparations for the occupation of Ruhr, rumors that the Brussels reparations conference would be postponed, the announcement that the revolutionary tribunals at Athens had condemned the leaders to death and the insistent claim that the Mosul oil dispute was seriously holding up the work of the frontier commission, all have contributed to make Lausanne uneasy.

Furthermore, doubts as to the exact role Russia will play at the conference have excited apprehensions. The Russians have announced their active support of the Turks in all Turkish claims, and by some are expected to plead the Turkish cause as if it were their own. To what extent they will be able to participate in the conference still remains in doubt tonight.

American Policy Affects
England and France seem determined not to permit more than a discussion of the Straits, but it is reported that actual discussion on the Russian petition is held up until the Italian delegates hear from Premier Mussolini, who has been advocating great freedom of speech at Lausanne.

American official intervention—insistence upon the open door policy in the Near East—continues to affect the calm of the conference. It appears especially to have afforded a great moral support to the Turks in their general demand for treatment on a basis of equity.

Turks Welcome Americans
Turkey will be glad to make a general treaty with the United States, and will be happy to begin negotiations at any time. Ismet Pasha informed the Associated Press tonight.

The representative of the Kemalist government has not yet begun treaty parlor with Ambassador Child, but said he stood ready to inaugurate an exchange of views at the first available moment.

"We should have a new treaty dealing with commercial and consular matters," he continued. "I hope, above all, that Americans will not worry about the future of educational and philanthropic institutions in Turkey. We want them to stay, and have no intention of adopting laws which would embarrass the continuance of the admirable American altruistic work among our people."

Courts Said Fair
Ismet seemed anxious over the American attitude toward the American attitude toward the Turkish demands for abolition of the capitulation, saying:

"We wish to establish our own courts and try all cases. Foreigners may be assured they will get a fair trial. We have heard that Americans and others object to our courts, as founded on the religious tenets of Mohammed. This is not true. Religion is one thing in our country, law another, and the law will be fairly and honestly administered."

Armistice Still in Force
Ismet Pasha objected in the Near East conference to reference to the Mudros armistice (signed by the allies and Turkey in 1918) and insisted that the Mudros armistice, relating to the Turkish-Greek war, was regarded by the Kemalists as the only one under which they were operating. This brought a protest from Lord Curzon, who said that Great Britain certainly regarded the armistice which the Turks made at the end of the great war as still in force, and could not accept the suggestion that mention be made only of the armistice negotiated at the end of the recent fighting between Greece and Turkey.

Muslims Want Reparations
This difference arose at the afternoon session, when Turkish financial and economic questions were under consideration. Ismet Pasha and former Premier Venizelos engaged in a long discussion of the claims Turkey and Greece have against each other. Ismet insisted upon reparations from Greece for the losses suffered by Turkey when, as he put it, the Greeks retreated recently and destroyed the Smyrna area.

Execution News Stirring
The news of the executions of the ministers at Athens caused great excitement among the delegates to the Lausanne conference tonight. Former Premier Venizelos of Greece denied himself to the newspapermen. The other Greek delegates said that without official information they were unable to say whether the executions would have any effect on the position of the Greek delegation.

Baptismal Service to Be At First Christian Church

The special services conducted by Dr. F. Betts under the Christian and Missionary Alliance, that have been going on the past two weeks in the W. C. T. U. hall, are expected to close Thursday evening with a baptismal service in the First Christian church, Center and High streets.

The Christian church people have loaned their church to the Alliance for the baptismal service. There will be preaching by Dr. Betts at this Thanksgiving and baptismal service. The public is invited. There are two services a day, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in the W. C. T. U. hall. The services have been marked throughout with a spirit of fervor and praise, and have been fruitful. Some have entered the Christian life. Some have been healed of physical ills. The Alliance will be in the W. C. T. U. hall from this on. Dr. F. Betts is being urged to remain over Sunday.

TURKEY SERVED TO KIWANIAN

Superintendent Kuser of Boys' School Speaker at Luncheon Tuesday

The first Thanksgiving turkey dinner of the year, so far as local chronology reports, was that served to the Kiwanis club Tuesday noon at the Marion. White meat and brown, genuine old colonial stuffing and gravy, pumpkin pie, new-fangled ripe olives, potatoes mashed white as snow, and cranberry sauce and lettuce leaves, all were on the bill of fare.

It took a longer time than usual to dine; and hardly a word was said except "Please pass things!" until it was all over. The club passed a vote of thanks to Manager Pierce for his thoughtfulness. Those who couldn't speak made signs, and it was absolutely unanimous.

Albert Gille presented two vocal numbers, "Life's Perfect Promise" and "Thank God for Gardens," with Miss Findley as accompanist, that were finely rendered and received with genuine enthusiasm.

W. L. Kuser, superintendent of the Oregon boys' training school, was the speaker of the day on the general topics of "Boys." Because of the approaching session of the state legislature, that is expected to take up the question of a new building site for the proposed new boys' school, Mr. Kuser devoted much of his time to an explanation of what the school needs.

The cottage system, he showed, brings to the boys the one thing that most of them need more than anything else—real home influences. A man and wife, to be father and mother to the boys, divorced or broken up homes, and to care for them in small home groups, he holds to be the only possible way to bring the boys to social normalcy. The present collective or congregate system, with all the boys in one vast heterogeneous heap, he characterizes, as the surest way to ruin good boys and to make bad ones worse.

Superintendent Kuser said that there would immediately be a large increase in the number of boys in the school if they could have the cottage system. Various judges out over the state have boys that need segregation, but they figure that to send the lads to the penitentiary would be wrong; to send them to corrupt the little, homeless, out-of-luck lads of the school would be a moral crime—and they are left sometimes to grow up unchecked in their own localities rather than send them to the congregate school. Yet to put them into cottage groups and give them home influences would in many cases bring them back to normalcy and save them to society.

A physician in the middle west has discovered what he calls "fatigue intoxication." Just what there would immediately be a large increase in the number of

World Champion Wrestler and Former Champ to Meet

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 28.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, world's heavyweight wrestling champion, and Stanislaus Zbyszko, former champion, were signed to meet in a championship match here December 14, it was announced tonight. The conditions of the match provide for a bout to the finish with two out of three falls deciding the owner of the championship belt. It was announced that a purse of $9,000 would be divided, 75 per cent to the winner and 25 per cent to the loser.

The Standard Oil of New Jersey apologizes for keeping its stock dividend down to 400 per cent. This must be a source of real grief to the stockholders.
