EDITORIALS OF THE PEOPLE

The Same Old Schemes
Editor Statesman:
We notice different propositions to be submitted to the coming legislature for consideration, and it seems the same old schemes, the object being to get all the money possible from the taxpayers. They find that thousands of autos are not worth the present license, and hence none would be procured, and there is a scheme on foot to put a flat rate on cars, apparently making the rate less and adding two cents extra per gallon, making it four cents per gallon. This sounds very fair, as usual; but they know that all licenses must be bought prior to January 1st at present rates, which stands for the year. They will pass the new gas bill and put it in force at the earliest time, and the people will pay both taxes. The present fish and game law as it now stands is solely in the interest of sports. Two years ago a few had bought licenses early, but just as soon as the present rates were even hinted, no blanks were procurable and no licenses could be issued until after the legislature had spent its usual amount of gab and time and passed the law and brought it in force, and then blanks were plentiful. The old law was instantly abolished and there was no waiting until the next year for the new law to become operative. We hope the coming legislature may prove able to dispel the dread and distrust of the taxpayers against our law makers.

Governor Roy Ritner, who declared that the state was proud of Willamette, and always had been proud of the university during his own 40 years of residence in the state, and he hoped the last dollar of the required endowment would be secured.

Secretary of State Sam Koser spoke of the great contribution of worth-while men to the public life of the state. "Willamette is filling a place in the state that no state school, however big, can fill," he said. "We are only doing our duty to support these, but we must support these schools like Willamette."

Justice Rand of the supreme court said that if Salem has any worth-while assets, it is Willamette university. He said that the day of the small college was at hand, that the student had a better chance for individuality than at the great university, however good; and the record of Willamette commended it to the state as one of Oregon's best investments.

General Morris told a story of Judge Rand showing where the "cowboy-judge" stands. Morris had visited him for a subscription, received it in a check. "I'll double it if it is needed at the very last," said the judge. Morris took the money and started away. "No, I'll double it right now, and then you stay away." So he doubled it. Again the solicitor started to leave. "Say," called the judge, "if you find it falling, come back again—won't you?"

UNUSUAL GIFTS
Merchandise for gifts the whole country over are very much the same, they can be purchased either in New York or Salem but there are some things that are peculiar to certain parts of the country and unusual in others. Among these are the many products of the Willamette valley. Our prunes cannot be excelled and our Franquette walnuts are the marvel of the country. King's Dehydrated Products are in a class by themselves and an assortment of their prunes, cherries, loganberries, apples, stringless beans, spinach, soup, vegetables and pumpkin flour would make an appreciated gift, and at the same time demonstrate the wonders of the Willamette valley.
