

OLIVER B. HUSTON

Worthy son of worthy parents, with a heritage of family history of which any American may be proud. Representative Huston steps into the forum in which his father, the late S. B. Huston, distinguished himself for many years. A devoted patriotism characterized his ancestry, and true to what has been expected of real American young men for generations back, Oliver Bruce Huston enlisted as a private when the World war broke out; was made sergeant and finally promoted to lieutenant of artillery. He was so well thought of by his companions in arms that he was honored with high position when the American Legion was organized. He practiced law as his father's partner before the war; since Senator Huston's death he has carried on the firm's practice and is recognized as a clean and able attorney.

Born 1887, Hillsboro, Oregon; son of the late Senator S. B. Huston and Ella Geiger. Huston, whose father, Dr. Wm. Geiger, came to Oregon in 1839 and reared a family in Forest Grove; graduated from the Hillsboro public school, later attended Tualatin academy and Pacific university; in 1906 entered University of Oregon and graduated in 1910 as president of the senior class. While there achieved extensive athletic honors and captained athletic teams; entered Yale law school 1910, graduating June, 1913, and then spent several months in Europe immediately prior to the World war; admitted to bar in June, 1914; was recently elected trustee of the Multnomah club by a highly complimentary vote.

W. F. JACKSON

River valley, 1872; took up farming; in Sherman County, 1887; reared his farm, 1916, and moved to Moro; was one of the organizers of the Farmers State Bank, of which he is vice president. He served in the 1909 legislature.

CAPT. B. F. JONES

Father of the Roosevelt highway bill and the free Oregon City locks bill, Capt. Jones has figured prominently in legislation tending to develop Oregon. He is full of patriotic sentiment and Oregon enthusiasm which expresses itself in his persistent and continuous work in behalf of his pet development projects.

As one of the leading citizens of the Oregon coast, he has been a potent factor in its industrial and transportation development. His interests have centered mainly around Yaquina Bay, where he was mayor of the county seat city of Toledo and now is mayor of the county metropolis of Newport. He represented Lincoln county in four previous legislatures, two of which were called in special as well as regular sessions, and developed great influence. Other public offices he held were registrar Roseburg land office; county clerk, Lincoln county, for three terms; also mayor, Independence.

He was born on his father's Kansas homestead, in 1858, and was left fatherless at the age of 8 when his patriotic parent, William L. Jones, died from the effects of exposure and injuries received as a soldier in the Civil war. In 1870, the widowed mother brought her four sons and one daughter to Yaquina bay and settled on a homestead which now includes an important part of Toledo. There the brave widow educated her children in what was then little more than a wilderness of underbrush and timber.

In 1882 Captain Jones married Ella Miller of Corvallis, and they have six children, four boys and two girls, all old enough to vote; one son having enlisted in the U. S. marine corps when war was declared. For more than 25 years Captain Jones has followed the logging and steamboating business. He has been behind the various moves for harbor improvement and port development, and although a heavy taxpayer has been an ardent and practical advocate of good roads.

THOMAS B. KAY

No legislature of which Representative Kay is a member ever does anything very foolish without the facts being brought out clearly in debate by that able member. One of the substantially successful manufacturers of Oregon with a high place in the councils of all that pertains to the industrial development of the state, Representative Kay not only brings this valuable experience to the 1923 session but also an official experience second to none enjoyed by any other member. When in the house and senate many years ago he won the reputation of "Watchdog of the Treasury."

REP. THOMAS B. KAY
Salem, Republican; Representative, 1903-5; senator, 1907-9; representative, 1921-23; 1st district, Marion county; state treasurer, 1910-18. Woolen manufacturer.

As state treasurer for two terms he made a highly successful official record, not only in that office but as a member of the various state boards, thus becoming acquainted with all the institutions of Oregon, the irrigation needs of the state and various other vital problems. Often mentioned for governor and congressman. A fearless man of positive character, quick to say exactly what he means, knows all the ins and outs of legislative organization and procedure, he is certain to be one of the most influential members. Born 1864, Trenton, N. J.; family removed to Oregon same year; father, Thomas Kay, founded and built up Brownsville Woolen Mills and son worked in business; three years at McMinnville college; in mercantile business, McMinnville, 1885-95; counsellor, school director, very active in civic affairs; married Cora M. Wallace of McMinnville, 1895, and removed to Salem, becoming assistant manager of Thomas Kay Woolen Mills, of which he became president up to his father's death in 1900; elected representative 1902, 1904; senate, 1906; state treasurer, 1910 and 1914; House of representatives, 1920 and 1922; member YMCA board over 20 years; trustee Willamette university; served as director and president Salem Board of Trade; director State Chamber of Commerce; active in State Manufacturers' association and many other statewide and local organizations; member of committee of Fifteen to recommend amendments to compensation law, 1921; member Christian church; Mason (Shriners), Elk, WOW; active in all patriotic drives, chairman of several; one of Oregon's most effective, public spirited and substantial citizens.

BEN F. KEENEY

Born on a farm near Eugene, Oregon, 1865; educated in the public school and the State normal at Monmouth; taught in the public schools; farmed; served in various minor public offices and as deputy sheriff, deputy county clerk and for seven years as deputy assessor, after which he was elected as county assessor and twice re-elected, serving, in all, 12 consecutive years as such officer. On being elected county assessor Mr. Keeney proceeded at once to the equalization of valuations between the properties of the common taxpayers and that of large companies and corporations to the extent of saving to the former thousands of dollars and establishing himself in their friendship such that he has a strong following throughout the county and in his election to his present office as representative he received the highest number of votes of the three candidates elected with five contestants in the field; this without the expenditure of a penny to further his candidacy. His present occupation is that of carpenter and house painter. His hobby or diversion is the breeding and exhibiting of fancy poultry, a side line in which he has been engaged for over 30 years. He is a licensed poultry judge by the American Poultry association and as such a fancier, is known all over the Pacific coast. Is one of the associate editors of The Northwest Poultry Journal.

REP. BEN F. KEENEY ... Eugene, Republican; representative, 1923, 3rd district, Lane county. Carpenter, painter.

Mr. Keeney is married and has three sons.

R. J. KIRKWOOD

Representative Kirkwood was born in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, February 17, 1882 (grandnephew of ex-Governor Samuel J. Kirkwood of Iowa, commonly known as the War Governor and later Secretary of the Interior under President Garfield). His parents moved to Oregon in 1885, purchasing a farm in Washington county near Hillsboro. Later his father took a homestead in Columbia county near Vernonia, where they lived until he was 14 years of age. Having had no school facilities up to that time, he left home in order to get an education, making his own way from that date on without aid of parents or others. At the age of 14 he entered the public school at Greenville, Washington, county, where he worked for his board on a farm. By working in sawmills, logging camps and railroad construction work he was able to finance himself through the rest of his educational work, finishing at Pacific University at Forest Grove in 1903. Upon finishing school he engaged successively in the insurance business and in educational work for an eastern extension university, having charge of their work in this state; later as assistant secretary of the bureau of trade and commerce of the Portland Chamber of Commerce and then for a short time with the extension department of Oregon Agricultural college. In 1917, with $586, he founded the Union Savings & Loan association of which he is now president, and which now has assets of over $600,000. Married; has wife and one daughter who is now a freshman at Pacific university. He is a trustee of Pacific university, a member of the board of directors of Greater Portland association, member of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, a Mason, Knight Templar and Shriner, and a member of the Congregational church. He has never before been a candidate for any public office; is a taxpayer in three counties in Oregon.

K. K. KUBLI

"Kap" Kubli is speaker of the house. Of vigorous mind and stalwart personality in three legislatures, established his reputation for courage, quick and keen judgment of measures and men, and debating ability of a higher order, distinguished by concise and forceful expression. He believes in the quick dispatch of business and in the elimination of the rambles from fatuous digression to immediate concentration on the real question at issue. He is sound in fundamentals and opposed to cluttering up the statute books with legislative fads, fancies and freaks. The rule by which he judges a bill is: Is it unjust, unfair or unconstitutional? and in his opinion it is any one of these three he calls it all three and starts a fight against it that is easily recognizable as a real right.

Last session was chairman of the Multnomah delegation. Is best known for having put the celebrated anti-picketing bill through the house in the face of one of the bitterest fights for many years, and for his effective work as chairman of the house ways and means committee.

Born Jacksonville, Oregon, 1859; bascked through school, University of Oregon and Harvard college, picking up enough knowledge to get a law degree and be admitted to practice; returned to Jacksonville and took over his father's hardware business later becoming manager of a mine at Gold Hill; went to Portland, worked five years for the Kilham Stationery & Printing Co., and then established himself in the same line; head of Kubli-Howell Co.; counsellor during administration of Mayors Lane and Simon; member Mayor Rushlight's executive board; one of leading Elks of Oregon; was Exalted Ruler.

LOUIS KUEHN

Representative Kuehn now resides at No. 361 25th street, N. Portland. Has been in the lumber manufacturing business in this state for over 40 years, now engaged in the automotive business at 320-326 Oregon street, Portland, with his two sons, the youngest of whom, Louis, Jr., is the world's champion diver, he being the first American to win this prize for Uncle Sam at the Olympic games in 1920.

Mr. Kuehn was a member of the house in the session of 1915, voting for or against the bills presented as his conscience dictated was right. He is one of the heavy taxpayers of his locality, and therefore will be interested in all measures tending to reduce taxes. Being a laboring man himself, he will be interested in measures affecting labor, where honest and true. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, Moose, and other fraternal organizations.

He is a staunch Republican, being a member of the board of governors of the Oregon Republican club, and which organization it was that induced him to become a candidate again for the legislature.

JAMES A. LACKEY

Representative James A. Lackey, Ontario, Democrat; representative, 1923, 17th district, Malheur county. Retired stockman.

A consequential citizen of unusual public spirit, Representative Lackey has participated actively in public affairs for many years, while building up a competence for himself, so that he is a considerable taxpayer. His experience as well as his sympathies are broad but he is of a practical turn of mind, and blessed with an unusual allowance of common sense. He comes to Salem determined to find out what can be accomplished to help relieve the stress of the farmer and stockman.

Born, Rockbridge county, Virginia, 1858; educated in district schools; removed to Kern county, California, 1875, engaging in mining for a time and later in the stock business; came to southern Malheur county (now Malheur county), 1880; in stock raising in the employ of Ryan & Lang two years, then with the Oregon Horse & Land Co., 18 years, retiring to live in Ontario, where he was mayor three terms and president of the Commercial club three terms; was one of the commissioners in building the first bridge across Snake river near Ontario; was first president of the Malheur county fair, serving three years; at Panama Pacific International Exposition, represented eastern Oregon the full term of the fair.

M. J. LEE

Representative M. J. Lee, Canby, Republican; representative, 1923, 16th district, Clackamas county. Real estate dealer.

An ardent community booster, who has figured for many years in promotion of pretty much every enterprise tending to develop Canby and the Molalla valley. Representative Lee will be found well informed and well able to present his viewpoint on the floor, in committee and by personal interview. Irrigation, drainage, weekly newspaper, county fair, county exhibits, community exhibits, electric light and power plant, good roads, street improvements, farm lands, city property—there has been scarcely a limit to his endeavor. His activity has made him a number of enemies, as may well be expected, for no one can try to do all he has tried to do in a well-behaved Willamette valley community without stirring up considerable feeling. His friends are more numerous than his enemies, however, as the primary election returns attest. Before the primaries, all the dopesters said, "Lee is a joke; he won't get anywhere; he will be at the bottom of the ticket—" but he got the nomination. Before the election the same dopesters said: "Lee is so weak he will be beaten by a democrat; the people all over the county know him so well they will vote for anyone else." But Lee was elected and here he is. Anyone who figures that just because he has done more for his home community and county than he has been able to do for himself, he will not be able to make much of an impression in the legislature, will find himself underestimating an exceedingly capable man.

D. C. LEWIS

D. C. Lewis is a lawyer by profession; office at 422 Chamber of Commerce building, Portland, Oregon. He likes a scrap. He loves his enemies—in a horn. He served in the 1915-1917-1919 sessions of the legislature, and in special sessions, so has had legislative experience. During the late campaign he was active for the compulsory school bill.

He is good natured in appearance and carries a smile of his own. He is a practical prohibitionist, for he says: Whiskey should be destroyed. He believes in strict law enforcement of all
