MILLIONS FOR CITY SCHOOLS

Eight-Year Improvement Plan is Approved by Open Forum

At the Chamber of Commerce open forum Wednesday night the civic affairs committee appointed several weeks ago, made a written report signed by its three members, Elmo White, W. H. Wilson and Col. E. Hofer, covering a number of recommendations for civic betterment. Their program was adopted by the chamber, and the committee continued, with authority to act and with the authorization of expense money to get it before the people of Salem.

The recommendations read: "Your committee appointed at the last meeting of the open forum of the Salem Chamber of Commerce to report on what are the most important lines of public work for this organization to concentrate upon for 1923, respectfully submit that in their opinion we should do three things:

"First, advertise the fact widely that Salem as an educational center surpasses any other western city of its class—a capital city of 20,000 population. We have compiled statistics for the school year of 1922-1923 showing an enrollment in all our educational institutions, not including the Salem Indian school, of 5155 students, including an university, the public schools, a business college and three private denominational schools. These educational units represent an investment in buildings, real estate and equipment of $2,500,000; have 249 teachers and employes on their payrolls that total $27,675 monthly wages, and are all on a sound financial basis.

"Thousands of Children "At the rate of increase in attendance for the past five years we estimate an enrollment of students by 1930 of 7779, an increase of 57 per cent. To provide housing and facilities for this growth in our educational population, new buildings must be erected to cost not less than $2,500,000. To operate the Salem educational units costs $323,100 per annum for wages alone, and fuel, lights, water, repairs, insurance and all items of upkeep will total nearly half a million dollars annually, or $25 per capita spent on education.

"Salem maintains besides a library equipment, together with the large state library, that makes this city the most desirable place in the west to secure an education and is one of the greatest causes of the rapid growth of the city. There is a constant addition of families that remove here from all parts of the west, and from the surrounding country to educate their children. Every phase of common school, high school, business training, collegiate, musical, theological and other forms of professional education can be secured at the Capital city of Oregon at a minimum of expense and grades of excellence second to no city in the west.

"The City Beautiful "The second line of concentrated action and co-operative action should be to make Salem still more famous as the city beautiful, the flower city of the Pacific coast. Salem is already famous for its wide streets, its wonderful public grounds and buildings, and its beautiful homes and private grounds and plantings. But a plan of intensive improvement and beautification should be undertaken for 1923.

"The state, county, city and school management should adopt uniform plans of planting borders, setting out plots of shrubbery, on some comprehensive plan outlined after a survey by a competent landscape gardener or engineer. The construction of the Pacific highway and other transcontinental motor roads will pour a stream of travel through our city that can scarcely be estimated. Our city should be made famous for the wonderful floral beauty that is possible in the open air of our long, perfect summers. Our climate will produce roses, dahlias, gladioli, tulips, and all varieties of the poppy family more perfectly, and in larger masses of bloom, and remain in the perfection of glorious colors for a longer time than any other place on the Pacific coast.

"The Home City Beautiful should be our slogan, but to approximate this our commercial
