J. W. Reddington Now in California Sends Comedy to Salem Friends

Frank Willman of Salem received a few days ago a letter from J. W. Reddington, down in California, that will interest the thousands of "Red's" old acquaintances. The letter itself tells nothing much, except the writer's unfailing cleverness. He was on the Statesman staff almost 50 years ago; he went later as a printer-editor to Roseburg, Heppner and to other places in Oregon, where he always got out a sparkling good-to-read paper. He writes to Mr. Willman in the same old untrammeled vein:

"Veracity first!"

"Safety second!"

"Dear Frank: Having just read in the Associated Press dispatches to the Ladies' Home Journal a glowing account of your first open-air concert at Salem, will say that I remember it as tho' it were yesterday, for Cale Reinhart and I and Willard Herron were hunting coons that night in the dense timber of Marlon square and plainly heard your good singing, which was carried all the way to us on long distance thought waves and it was only interrupted by the boom of the sunrise gun next morning, when Capt. John Green touched off the old brass cannon up in the state house park. And your sweet voices still come echoing down the corridors of time.

"Am glad to be able to report that the wild oats crop you sowed when you were scouting around here with Gabrillo and Fremont, are now growing an inch an hour, thanks to the abundant rains brought by the recent dry moon, which you predicted. But when the big harvest moon comes along these oats of yours will be so light that it will take 13 acres of them to lunch a mocking bird, and we are all hoping that you will get Luther Burbank to cross them with bananas or something plump and fattening, so that they will be well worth while.

"Hoing that you have many more Merry Christmases, and promising myself that next one I will send you a cord of petrified

OPERA COMPANY OPENS AT GRAND

The American Light Opera company which gave such a magnificent performance of "The Bohemian Girl" at the Grand theater last night, came to Salem after a remarkable record in Portland. This organization had closed its second engagement there at the Auditorium Sunday night, when it was learned that owing to the floods the route had to be changed so that Wednesday night of this week was open.

A miscellaneous program was hurriedly arranged and announced to be swiped from the meat-safes of the Arizona Cliffdwellers. V. T. Y.

"—J. W. Redington."

"J. Watermelon Redington" he used to sign himself; and what he did to the English language, and how splendidly he adorned and vivified the plain truth, in the days when he was a free lance in Oregon journalism are still fragrant and flagrant memories of all the old timers of Salem. "Red" is now foreman of the printing plant at the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, at Soldiers' home, near Los Angeles. Judge Burnett, A. C. Moores, "Jim" Coleman and most of the other old-timers of Salem were his pals in many a prank of the long ago. They helped to make Oregon history worth the living while it was on earth.

JOHN STAYED OUT

"John Wanamaker and I were born the same year and both left school and started to earning the same year, John at $1.25 a week and I at $1.50 a week," says M. M. Beck in the Holton (Kan.) Recorder. "Somehow or other, although I led him at the start, he distanced me considerably in the outcome, we'll say a matter of a hundred million or so."

"I think, dear," said Mrs. Grabbit. "I'll ask the people next door to share our Christmas dinner."

"Why?" asked her husband. "Well, the man left their turkey here by mistake, and it seems only fair."—London Tit-Bits.

in the papers on Monday. The program consisted of several numbers of grand opera gems, the full second act from "Martha" and the second act of "Robin Hood." Imagine the delight of both the management and the company members when the curtain went up on the performance with every seat on the main floor of the large auditorium taken and the balcony and galleries well filled. The program was one grand ovation for each one of the principals, and the choral work met with storms of applause. It is conceded that no company in recent years, outside the grandest king of grand opera has made such a favorable impression on Portland music lovers. These same artists, with a chorus, rightly named the "wonder chorus," is here this week and all lovers of good music and good, clean, wholesome comedy should hear them in these immortal light and grand operas. The "Mikado" to-night, "Pinafore" Saturday afternoon and the "Chimes of Nor-mandy" will close the short night, "Pinafore" Saturday afternoon here at the Grand.
