STAYTON

Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Forette of Shaw spent Wednesday at the E. T. Mathison home in Stayton.

Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Down left the first of the week for Portland and Astoria after a month's visit at the J. P. Davis home here.

Forrest Mack took his mother to Albany Tuesday, where she took the train for her home in Sillet.

Mrs. Roll Harold returned home from Silverton Saturday night, after being absent from home for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Gilky of Gilkey station spent Sunday as guests at the home of Mrs. C. A. Titus.

C. E. Cramer and Mrs. Cramer spent several days last week in Portland, returning home on Saturday evening's stage.

So much interest has been taken in the special meetings which were held at the Methodist Episcopal church all of last week, that the services have continued nightly all of this week also.

The men's glee club of the Willamette university came over on Friday of last week and put on a splendid entertainment at the school auditorium in the evening.

A. A. Faulkner was given a surprise party on his 27th birthday Saturday by Mrs. Faulkner; quite a gathering of friends and relatives made the day a memorable one.

T. J. Smith, overseer of the Salem Ditch company, has completed the installing of the new head gates, which washed out during the recent flood, and is now busy cleaning up the wreckage and debris which washed into the race, filling it up in places. Mr. Smith thinks the work will be completed ready to turn in the water by next Sunday.

The Stayton Ditch company, owned and operated by Gardner & Bennett, succeeded in turning in enough water last Saturday to operate the electric light plant and the water systems which was much relief to the citizens who had been without lights and water for two weeks. The mills and factories are still idle, as considerable dredging on the river will be necessary before water enough can be had to supply them the necessary power to run.

A baby daughter arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Mack early Sunday morning, weighing 10 1-2 pounds. This is the fifth child in the Mack home which now gives them three boys and two girls.

the Dallas Business Men Plan Weekly Noon Luncheons

DALLAS, Or., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Statesman.)—A noon luncheon staged by the finance committee of the Dallas Commercial club was held at the Hotel Gail today and proved to be a big success, about 65 members of the club attending. After the luncheon Mr. Duryeu, a prominent booster from the Portland Chamber of Commerce was present and made a pleasing address to the club members regarding organization and boosting. It is the plan of the club to hold these luncheons at least once each month and get some speaker of note here to address the members along lines of interest to such organizations. The next luncheon will be held on the evening of February 7, the regular meeting night of the club, and will be held in the club room on Mill street.

BROWN'S BILL IS APPROVED

Senate Passes Act to Protect Farmer Peddlers—Others Acted on

A bill by Senator Brown of Marion which would allow a farmer or his employe to peddle the produce of the farm in a city or town without the requirement of paying a license passed the senate yesterday.

Benefit Act Amended

A bill by Senator Hare amending the Benefit bonding act so that if a property owner fails to pay one installment of a street assessment the entire amount becomes due. The bill is not drawn so as to be retroactive. Senator Hare said the measure would make it unnecessary for many cities to amend their charters. Under the present act cities are able to foreclose and sell the property only for the amount of the one installment. The bill was amended to give the property owners one year's notice instead of 60 days.

Buyers Protected

A bill by Senator Moser providing for liability of abstract companies passed the senate. It is designed to protect property owners from errors by abstractors.

Independence Bootlegger Sent to T. B. Hospital

DALLAS, Or., Jan. 25.—(Special to The Statesman.)—C. L. Irvine of Independence who with his wife was arrested by Sheriff John W. Orr two weeks ago on a bootlegging charge and given a seven-month jail sentence and a $200 fine after a hearing in justice court, will be sent to the state tuberculosis hospital in Salem this afternoon or tomorrow. After being committed to the county jail it was discovered that he had tuberculosis, and it was considered dangerous to have him in the same building with the other prisoners. Application was made some days ago for his commitment to the state hospital, but on account of the crowded condition of the place at that time it was impossible for the officers to send him away. Word reached Dallas today that there was a vacancy in the hospital and Irvine will be sent immediately.

Involuntary Trespass

Double damages will be allowed timber owners by a bill of Senator Fisk of Linn and Linn which passed the senate yesterday. At present when trespass on one owner's land occurs by another the owner is allowed only damages for the stumpage. Under the Fisk bill he also would be allowed damages for the expense of survey and estimate of the damage.

Lien Bill Approved

Representative Hammond's house bill providing for the filing of federal liens in offices of county clerks and recorders passed the senate yesterday.

The new wife of William Hollen zollern says: "I know I love him." She is in a class all by her lonesome.

Revelations of a Wife

CHAPTER 221

THE STRANGE PHRASE MARION SPOKE TO MADGE

I worked rapidly on the list for Lillian of the clothing Marion would require in North Carolina, and was glad indeed that I had just finished it when Lillian returned to the library. She was telling so swiftly and efficiently herself that I would have felt much chagrined if, in Dicky's parlance, I had "gummed-up the same" by my slowness. She came in swiftly, bearing a large manuscript envelope in her hand, which she laid on the table before me. As she did so, I handed her the list I had prepared. She looked at it in pleased surprise.

"Finished so soon?" she said, and taking the list she ran quickly over it with a practiced eye.

"This is exactly what I want," she said, "and you have made it so easy for me to go over the clothes Marion already has by your clever classification here. This will save me a lot of time, my dear. Thank you so much."

"Please don't waste time or breath thanking me, I replied. "You know how glad I am to be of any service to you."

"I know that you're a dear," Lillian said energetically, then she took up the envelope she had brought in.

"Luckily, Betty is a collector of old newspapers," she said. "She sells them to the rag and bottle man for perfectly fabulous sums, according to her notion. I think she plans to set up a rooming house or something on the proceeds. So I was lucky enough to find the ones from last Sunday in the pile she keeps in a corner of the kitchen. I have been going through the real estate advertisements, and clipped out everything possible on Long Island. I thought we could take up Westchester and Jersey later."

Keeping Close Home.

"I don't want to consider anything but Long Island," I returned. "You see, sometime Dicky and I want a little summer home out on the east end of the island, where we were last summer, you know, and, of course, we want this suburban home within motoring distance."

Just about have time for them before luncheon. You won't have to change your gown before the trip, will you?"

"Not unless you think it necessary," I replied demurely.

"Fishing!" Fishing!" she mocked. "You don't deserve a bite! But I'll tell you what you already well know, that you look perfectly stunning in that suit. The only thing I'm afraid of is that the real estate man will think you're a member of the Astor family seeking to increase your land holdings, and run up the prices on you."

"If you have anything to do," I remarked coldly, "you'd better be about it."

She laughed delightedly. "Got a rise out of your ladyship that time! But remember, luncheon in ten minutes."

"When Uncle Robert Comes."

She darted out of the room, and I conned the advertisements carefully, selecting those for immediate consideration which lay within easy motoring distance of Marvin. I put all the others carefully back in the envelope for future reference, and tucked into my purse the ones I had selected. Then I bathed my face and hands, prinked a bit, and went downstairs just as Betty announced luncheon.

Marion and Lillian were already in the dining room, the child clinging to her mother's hand and taking little quick dancing steps up and down as if she were on springs, and the mechanism animating her would not stop.

"Oh, Auntie Madge!" she exclaimed, as I came in. "Have you heard the perfectly scrumptious news that I'm going South to see Junior? Of course, you have, I keep forgetting, but I'm just so crazy happy I can't think anything straight!"

"Just so you sit up straight and eat your luncheon we'll excuse the state of your mind," her mother said gravely, but with a loving smile on her face.

Marion pressed her lips to her mother's sleeve in a swift, darting caress—an endearment peculiarly her own—and came around behind my chair to pull it out and seat me.

"You see," she explained, "there isn't any man in our house until Uncle Robert comes to stay, to do things like this, so I have to be a boy sometimes."

"Marion!" her mother exclaimed, in a startled voice, with a note of sternness in it which I had never before heard addressed to her little daughter.

The child flushed distressedly, but she faced her mother with her little head held high in "concealous rectitude."

"But, mother," she said, "I truly thought Auntie Madge wasn't outside the family."

"All right, sweetheart," her mother replied tenderly. "Eat

Is Your Arch Stiff or Springy

Do you get any spring from the arch of your foot? The average woman does not, because she wears a stiff-shank shoe. "Any elasticity she gets is from flexion and extension at the knee, her feet being no more springy than blocks of wood," commented a noted Scottish physician in the London Lancet.

What Nature Planned

Each foot is composed of 26 small bones arranged in arched positions, held together by muscles and ligaments and intended by nature to remain resilient so that your body weight will be cushioned and the shocks of walking be absorbed by this springy formation of your feet.

In other words, nature indicates that your shoes should be springy—not rigid—at the main (longitudinal) arch. Cantilever Shoes are so made—flexible and natural instead of concealing a metal "shank piece" as do all ordinary shoes.

The Resilient Arch

This explains why Cantilevers are such delightful shoes for walking. They give you that springy, "poppy" feeling which is typical of youth. Come and see how stylish they are—in addition to their comfort. We are exclusive Cantilever agents for this district.
