JUDGE TELLS OF OLD TIMES

Salem Pioneer in Talk at Lion's Club Lunch Goes Back to Year of 1851

"I have lived in the same house on lot 1, block 1, precinct 1, Salem, for 61 years," was one of the interesting statements of Judge Peter D'Arcy, "old timer," at the Lions' club luncheon Friday noon. He was there to tell them about the jungles of Old Salem in the years "befo' th' wah."

"I remember the flood of 1861, when the steamboats came up almost to the First Methodist church, and teams on the street in front of the church had to swim in hauling their people up to the old Oregon institute building for safety."

Remembers Baker
"And I remember when Col. E. D. Baker made his great speech before the public mass meeting July 4, 1860, where the Steusloff building now stands. He was a great man; one of the most wonderful speakers of America. His ability won him the election to the United States senate from Oregon, when he had been but seven months in the state. When he appeared in his army uniform in the senate in 1861, to answer the southern orator, Breckenridge, he took the whole nation by storm. He was killed only a little later at the battle of Ball's Bluff. Col. Nesmith was elected to the senate with him. He lived longer, to be a power for the state."

Was Printers' Devil
"I served my apprenticeship in the printing office in Salem, beginning at 12 years of age, and getting $3 a week. The men used to get from $25 to $40, and every Saturday night they used to have a big poker game and the boss used to clean them out, usually down to the last cent. How they did rave and curse the government and everything but themselves! They used to take it out on me, the cub, and they sure made me an anti-card crank."

The speaker was down in San Francisco two years ago to attend a great old-timers' meeting given by Senator Shortridge. When he was called on to speak he asked the crowd of 300 pioneers how many had been there when Casey and Casey were hanged by the Vigilantes; he himself was the only one! He had gone to San Francisco with his parents in 1855 and were there when the hanging took place. He was a "cute little fellow with long curls," and they called him "The Commodore" on the long journey from Brooklyn to the Golden Gate. The family came up to Oregon in 1869.

Hooked Melons
Judge D'Arcy told of a melon-hooking experience in which he and 13 others were engaged when they fished the melons from the field of Dr. Adair, one of the old-timers of Salem. Dr. Adair captured the D'Arcy kid and demanded the names of his associates. "If you ever tried to manufacture 13 wrong names that would sound right as fast as a man could write them down, you will know how busy I was," said the judge. The irate doctor started out to collect the 13 melon stealers, but found that he had been given a bum steer. But he did pick up another iad who gave the whole story away. Dr. Adair was furiously agitated when little Peter told him that Pete and Ed Hatch, sons of one of his Congregational church elders, had been in the raiding gang; he wanted to skin 'em alive. But they hadn't really been of the party, and they escaped.

The Lions gave the speaker a rousing vote of appreciation. Walter Kirk gave the attendance prize for the day, a silver ash tray, which was drawn by Carroll Waters. William Hickey was chairman for the day. The club is to entertain a company of boys, one for each member, on Friday, February 23, besides the minstrel show to be given some time during February.

for the promotion of vocational rehabilitation of persons disabled in industry.

S. B. 159, Smith, Taylor, La Follet, Strayer, Zimmerman—Providing that the experimental requirements of University of Oregon and Oregon Agricultural college be met from the millage tax.

S. B. 160, committee on banking—Setting aside Lincoln's birthday and Armistice day as public holidays.

S. B. 161, Hall (by request)—Requiring non-resident motorists to register with the secretary of state.

S. B. 162, Dennis—(by request)—Providing for regulation of commission merchants by the public service commission.

S. B. 163, Staples (by request)—For the settlement of labor controversies and providing for arbitration.

S. B. 164, banking committee—Revised banking code.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

"The groundhog saw his shadow"—
Or he would have seen it if there had been any groundhog here—

If you have not read the article by President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot in The Statesman of this morning, read it. If you have read it, read it again. The American people are no pikers. They have not lost their idealism. They have not forgotten that they are a part of the big world, and therefore partly responsible for the conduct of all the peoples of the earth. This matter will not down. But it will decide presidential elections—or at least one presidential election; the next one or the next or the next, or some following one—if the present administration at Washington does not wake up; yes, more than this—if it does not get busy and do something; do the things that will show intelligent and active response to the heartbeats of the great American people, who are neither selfish cowards nor ossified or assiduous insular clams.

Dr. Owens-Adair is happy. Sterilization laws have been passed in 15 states, and other states are going to pass them; and Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Chicago municipal court, is urging federal cooperation—and Judge Olson is president of the research bureau of the Carnegie Foundation and a student of criminal heredity. He is one of the leaders in the war for sterilization. "The Chinese worship their ancestors; we should worship posterity," says Judge Olson. He declares that we must make our duty to posterity a part of our religion. But Dr. Owens-Adair, besides being a national leader in this work, is a pioneer in it. She began work in this field when she was hooted at; ridiculed; made the subject of ribald laughter and vulgar jokes by the Hicks of all the Hickvilles in the country, and all the morons and other brands and degrees and shades of fools running at large.

Rare Stamp Collectors Get Blow from Printers

VIENNA, Jan. 12.—The comparatively few possessors of certain rare specimens of Austrian stamp issues, long since withdrawn from circulation, awakened the other morning to find that the postal administration had, in its zeal to twell the revenues of the department, caused these obsolete specimens to be reprinted and disposed of to postage stamp vendors.

The result has been a flood of angry letters to the press, backed up by the energetic protest of the Philatelic Society. The postmaster, however, has not been deterred and he is flooding the market with more resuscitated old issues.

FLOOD CAUSES HOP LOSSES

Approximately 1000 Acres Suffer in Recent High Water is Estimate

Approximately 1000 acres of hops within a few miles of Salem, suffered in the recent Willamette flood, according to T. A. Livesley, of Salem. Some of the fields have suffered so heavily that they may not recover.

The damage was done, not in the fields being under water to damage the permanent hop roots, but in the destruction of the trellising. This costs, new, about $80 an acre, and is an investment good only for hops. To add that much money to a hop field, in the present condition of the open market, is a risk that Mr. Livesley does not expect many of the uncontracted dealers to take.

Ruinous Market
Some of the growers who have war-time contracts, however, may replace their trellises. The old prices are so much higher than the present market price, that the trellis investment would pay even for the one or two years the contracts have to run. The English and other buyers don't actually want the hops; the English laws that shut out all foreign hops except those "actually necessary," have put the Oregon hop growers clear to the wall. The responsible English contractors have been piling up their contract hops, that they couldn't take into England except the small part needed after the English grown hops were used; and nobody could know how much would be wanted, until the home stuff was all used. This puts the marketing of the foreign-grown hops clear to the close of the season, when the new crop is just ready to come on, and it is a ruinous market.

Many to Try Again

The buyers might be glad enough for the Willamette flood, that wiped out some of their contract liabilities. The incredible reduction in the consumption of beer in England, practically one-third less than it was a few years ago, has left the English hop growers able to supply most of their own needs.

As it is understood that almost none of the Willamette Valley hop contracts run for more than two years at the longest, and many expire this year, it is not believed that many fields that were stripped of their trellises by the flood will try hops again, even for this season that might pay them big money but for the expense of rebuilding. Many uncontracted growers last year, who already had their trellises up, failed to pick their hops last fall, because of the low price. No great market change is anticipated this year, and with the expensive trellises down, the local hop situation looks a good deal like no situation at all—nothing doing in hops.

Land Desirable
As really good hop land is especially desirable for evergreens and for almost any other kind of small fruits, or beans or some other vegetables for canning, it is not anticipated that the land will lay idle this season. Some of the lands that were heavily inundated especially where the water backed up on them and did not create too much of a current, have been splendidly enriched by the deposit of silt from further up the river. One farmer near Talbot reports that the water drove his family to the barn to live, and carried off some of his small buildings and fences, nevertheless brought him fertility worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. The flood that made the hop business a total loss didn't worry him a bit, he said; it was his bank and his savings account. This is understood to be true of more than one hop farm in the valley.

STOPS COUGHS AND COLDS
Neglected coughs and colds lead to influenza, la grippe, asthma and bronchitis, and the old method of "letting it run its course" is rapidly giving way to preventive treatment. Three generations of users have testified to the quick relief given by Foley's Honey and Tar from coughs, colds, croup, throat, chest and bronchial trouble. Contains no opiates—ingredients printed on the wrapper. Refuse imitations and substitutes. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Watson's Bill Preventing Special Counsel Defeated
Representative Watson's bill prohibiting the employment of special counsel by state officers, officers, boards, commissions, or department of the state and requiring that the attorney general assign an assistant attorney general to such cases, was defeated by the house yesterday. The objections to the bill were that this would lead to considerable additional expense in the attorney general's office and would cause needless delay in important cases.
