wants to call Uncle Sam a liar, but he certainly missed it when he said rain. It was actually the heaviest snow of the year, with the wind in the north and enough snow to make every tree a lace-work of filmy white and every sidewalk a foot-soaking first step to pneumonia or a barking cough. It wasn't good snow for the boys, either, for it was too light and feathery to pack well for snow-balling. What's the use of a government that doesn't keep its word when it promises rain instead of snow, and then when it does substitute by sending something "just as good," it sends a punk snow that won't snowball? But inn melting it made a splendid soak for pedestrians.

Forestry Talk Tuesday—C. S. Chapman of the forest service is to be the speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon Tuesday noon at the Marion. He will tell practically all about wood and the things they make of it; houses, clothes, baskets, cribs, baseball bats, heads, money. Oregon has one-fifth of the commercial standing timber in the United States, according to "the man" who makes up the figures; and Mr. Chapman has all this information right at his finger tips where he can play on it as some men would operate a fiddle or as Paderewski would manipulate a piano. An excellent musical program is also in prospect to make the luncheon an especial landmark in the club history.
