Wallace Reid in "30 Days." There's no place like jail!

This is the strain of Wallace Reid's late activity on his musical treatments. And Wally maintains there's more truth than poetry in the parody, for he recently found home a highly dangerous place and jail his best refuge. This was in "Thirty Days," his latest Paramount picture, which is showing its last times today at the Liberty theatre.

Wally's life is continually menaced by a murderous Italian, after he finds the young man innocently in the arms of his wife. The star, as John Cadwalder Floyd, is a philanthropist and is most sympathetic. Poenta thinks other wise and gets his "Society of the Thousand Eyes" after Wally, who decides he had better go to jail until Poenta sails for Italy, which he is scheduled to do before the expiration of thirty days. He does his "bit" and then decides he wants to continue an inmate a while longer—for the very good reason that his arch-enemy is awaiting him at the jail gate. Wally actually has to be kicked out. Then some more fun begins when the unrelenting Italian takes up the chase again.

The picture is full of laughs. There's fun all the way through in Wally's aversion to knives, and also, the character of Palmer, the rival laughs with his constant reiteration of his intention to go to Africa to shoot lions.

Heading the supporting cast is Wanda Hawley. Other well known players in the cast are Charles Ogle, Cyril Chadwick, Herschell Mayall, Helen Dunbar, Carmen Phillips and Kalla Pasha.

Fourteen members of the crew of the whaling schooner used for filming Ben Ames Williams' famous story, "All the Brothers Were Valiant," tomorrow at the Oregon theatre, were thrown into the cold waters of the Pacific when two twenty-foot whale boats collided several times out from San Francisco. Because of their heavy clothing, oilskins and seamen's boots they were saved only with difficulty.

The only prominent member of the cast in either of the boats was Robert McKim. Irvin V. Willat, who directed the picture, Billie Dove, Malcolm McGregor and Lon Chaney were interested spectators on the tug, which also bore the battery of cameras grinding steadily away.

In this scene of the Irvin V. Willat production the boats were to be chasing a whale for some distance. The gunners in the bows were to be shown preparing to fire their massive forty-pound harpoon guns. The whale boats were motor driven. First one, then the other forged ahead as they lurched and churned through the rough waters. The boats had occasionally approached each other closely but at the moment of firing they crashed together, the bow of one being smashed and both capsizing.

Mr. Willat's tug immediately came to the rescue. Cold and shivering, the men were hauled aboard and headed back for the schooner and dry clothing and hot drinks.

"Give them the best of care," directed Mr. Willat, "and tell them we'll shoot that stuff again tomorrow morning."

"All the Brothers Were Valiant is an Irvin V. Willat production for Metro Pictures Corporation.

The mysteries of San Francisco's Chinatown are laid bare for the first time in film history in "Barriers of Folly" at the Bligh theatre today. Sliding doors, trap doors, mysterious hangings, shadowy nooks, hidden bunkers—all these are invariably associated with Chinatown.

CITY COUNCIL ACCEPTS CEMENT BID

Individual property apportionments are made, which would be several months, perhaps almost a year for the last of it. This practice had been followed for 1922, and the city saved the interest on the whole cement purchase for an estimated six months. Seven of the council stayed by the committee report, however, and only five voted for the interest-saving offer of the Spaulding company. Alderman Wenderoth raised the question that maybe the West Side company would do as well in carrying the account, interest free; though Alderman Van Patton pointed out that their bid didn't promise it.

Paving Petition Up

The North Front street paving petition came up again, this time for a shorter district than the one of two weeks ago, only between D and Gaines streets. The petition said "bitulitic," and the council instantly threw fit over the patented work. It was shown, however, that the petitioners wanted only the black asphaltic concrete as used by the city and county, and not the patented bitulitic name of the Warren company. But the petition goes back for revision of that deadly work. The petitioners wanted this form of paving because they couldn't close the street long enough for an ordinary concrete paving that takes almost a month to harden. The matter comes up again at the next meeting.

A report on the performance of the new power pump outfit for the fire department, showed that it had exceeded the specifications of the underwriters' association in its test last week. The city recorder was authorized to draw a warrant for the payment of the purchase price, and the machine now belongs to the City of Salem.

questions will disclose, and while it and the words "white persons" are treated as synonymous for the purpose of the statute, they are not of identical meaning.

The words "white persons" are words of "common speech and not of scientific origin," the court continued. The word "caucasian," however, by common usage acquired a popular meaning, which is of much narrower scope, the court said, than its scientific application.

Says Hindu Not Caucasian

"It is in the popular sense of the word therefore, that we employ it as an aid to the construction of the statute," the court states. . . .

"The words of the statute are to be interpreted in accordance with the understanding of the common man from whose vocabulary they were taken."

The words "free white persons" are to be interpreted, the court said, as synonymous with "Caucasian" only so far as that word is popularly understood. Whatever may be the speculations of the ethnologist as to what races it includes, it does not, the court held, include the body of men to whom the Hindu belonged.

world war and while at Camp Lewis, wearing a uniform again asked for papers. His request was denied by Federal Judge Edward Cushman of Tacoma on grounds that a Hindu is not white. Thind then appealed in Portland. Judge Charles E. Wolverton then handed down a decision admitting the Hindu. V. W. Tomlinson, naturalization commissioner, had a petition for cancellation filed.

Judge Wolverton overruled the petition and it was carried to the circuit court of appeals which refused to act upon it but certified it direct to the supreme court with the result that the decision reversing Judge Wolverton was handed down today.

AFFECTS ALIEN LAND LAW

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 19.—The decision of the United States supreme court holding that high caste Hindus are not subject to citizenship, places such residents in California under the anti-alien land law and affects large tracts of their actually owned and leasehold lands in the state, Attorney General U. S. Webb said.

Mr. Webb said that possible actions against the land owning and land leasing Hindus under the anti-alien land law "would be considered when the occasion arose." Today's decision, he held to be of the same importance as the Japanese exclusion decision and "of vital importance to the whole Pacific coast."

examiners, state architect, district attorney, deputy attorney general, army officers and other agencies. The attendants whose heroic work resulted in the rescue of 300 patients in the ward, made a round of the various investigations.

Blast Blamed

Dr. Heyman and his men continued to declare a blast accompanying dredging operations just south of the island, had been the direct cause of the fire, breaking the insulated wiring, causing a short circuit.

Brigadier General Edward Burr of the army engineers corps, directing the blasting operations after a separate investigation, denied vigorously the theory that a shock was responsible for the fire.

Great crowds of friends and relatives gathered on the Manhattan side early today, waiting to be ferried across the river.

Officials reassured them but barred them from the island. Friends of the dead were referred to the Bellevue hospital morgue whether the 20 bodies so far recovered have been removed.

Identification Solved

Identification proved a slow process, so badly had the bodies been burned and hospital authorities soon gave up hope of finding the missing five, saying they had been cremated.

Throughout the night the volunteer fire department kept wetting down the walls of the burned wing, sometimes razing blocks of masonry that threatened to topple.

Dr. Mortimer Raynor, assistant superintendent of the hospital, estimated that it would cost $200,000 to $300,000 to replace the rained wing.

general's office at the request of Governor Pierce.

The oleo bill was originally assigned to the food and dairy products committee of which Ed. Cary of Yamhill county, is chairman, but was immediately taken from that committee by Speaker Kubli and sent to the judiciary committee.

Wants Favorable Report

It developed last night that one member of the committee, Representative Bailey, was standing out for a favorable report.

The unfavorable section was made up of Representative Lewis, chairman; Hammond, Meindl, and Huston. Representatives Carlin and Mott were of the opinion that the bill should never have been assigned to the committee and were reluctant to vote on the report.

It was finally agreed that a minority report should be submitted by Bailey and the balance of the committee should submit an unfavorable report. With this understanding the committee broke up but in a few minutes was recalled to the committee room and the re-reference agreed upon.

Movie Bill Presented

The motion picture tax bill was presented before the committee by L. J. Liljeqvist, assistant attorney general, and James Linn of Salem.

The bill would place a tax of five per cent on the gross incomes derived from "the exhibition or use, or the right to the exhibition or use within the state of Oregon" of films or any franchise or legalized privilege of any kind relative thereto.

It was stated by Linn that Oregon show houses send about 70 or 80 per cent of their gross income outside of the state in royalties and franchises.

REFUSE POLICIES TO BOOTLEGGERS

Insurance Companies Won't Insure Lives Because of Moral Hazard.

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 18.—While the regularly constituted authorities are experiencing some difficulty in locating wealthy bootleggers, important life insurance interests say they are finding them with comparative ease and, because of the "moral hazard" involved, are refusing to insure their lives.

Men who a few years ago were glad to carry policies covering a few thousands, are now making application for policies ranging from $50,000 to $100,000, and in some instances in excess of the latter amount. Unless they are well known and have a high business standing they are very carefully investigated, and if there is any suspicion as to the source of their incomes, they are rejected, it matters not how good a physical risk the examining physicians decide they may be.

Within the past few weeks one applicant who wanted a policy of $50,000 was rejected on the ground that he was not a good moral hazard, and a little later an applicant who wanted insurance to the amount of $100,000 was told he could not have it. Other applications from other bootleggers have gone the same way, they say.

"We count the moral hazard as something worth while," said an insurance authority, discussing the business offered his company by bootleggers. "We feel we cannot afford to take on men of this kind, and rather than compromise morals, we refuse all such applications. How do we know they are bootleggers? When we see a man grow suddenly rich, without any visible means, we are suspicious, and a little investigation usually tells us whether we are right or wrong. It might be difficult for us to prove it in court, but we prove it to our own satisfaction, with a reasonable mental margin of safety."

Metropolitan Tenor Will Sing Tonight at Concert in Armory

PAUL ALTHOUSE

Tonight at the armory, Paul Althouse, noted Metropolitan tenor, will make his first appearance before an audience of Salem music devotees. It has become quite generally established that a distinguished artist may always be relied upon to present on his or her program selections which will be enjoyed by the general public. In this respect Althouse is said to be very considerate. His selections are of a high quality, yet he always seems to find songs which are essentially melodious and which touch the hearts of his hearers.

Mr. Rudolph Gruen, accompanist for Mr. Althouse, has likewise gained for himself considerable distinction in his field of musical endeavor. One of his compositions "The Phantom Ship" will be sung by Mr. Althouse. Mr. Gruen will also play a group of
