C. V. Eakin was fined for speeding 38 miles per hour yesterday by Judge G. E. Unruh in the Justice court.

Plowing Done—
Much plowing is being done out through the country this week. The well drained lands are in quite good condition for plowing, though the undrained flats are still reeking with moisture and will not be ready for the plow for some days, or even weeks. Most of the snow is gone from the valley; it still persists only in the wooded north slopes, and it does not look very permanent anywhere. The condition of fall grain indicates a bumper crop; it never looked more promising than it does right now.

Flake's Petland—

Today Legal Holiday—
Today, Thursday, is a legal holiday, and the banks and public offices will be closed for the day. Maybe George Washington would have been too thrifty to want a whole nation to quit its job to celebrate any one man—but he's gone and can't help it. The legislature is the only thing official that will be in operation today.

Experienced Cashier and Candy—
Girl wanted. The Spa.—Adv.

No Mail Deliveries—
There will be no general delivery of mail today according to a report issued from the postmasters office yesterday evening. The stamp window and general delivery window will, however, be open from nine until ten o'clock, a. m.

SHAKESPEARE MUCH IN DEMAND, REPORT

Advance Manager of Fritz Leiber Says Career a Notable One.

Harry C. Eldred, advance manager for Fritz Leiber, great Shakespearean actor who comes to the Grand theater one night to give performances of his epoch-making "Romeo and Juliet" and "Merchant of Venice," is in Salem arranging for the appearance of the star and company under George Ford's direction.

"This handsome young star's career has been a notable one, said Mr. Eldred. "It covers a period of 18 years during which time he served consecutively as leading man with the Ben Great Players, to Olga Petrova, to David Warfield, to Julia Marlowe in 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' and 'If I Were King.' Prior to his becoming a star he was ten years leading man and co-star with the veteran Robert B. Mantell.

"Four years ago he embarked as an individual luminary, and his success was meteoric from the start. During his sensational New York engagements such critics as George Jean Nathan, editor of the Smart Set magazine; Alexander Woolcott of the Times; Stephen Rathbun of the Sun, and Arthur Hornblow of the Theater Magazine united in the opinion that he was America's most interesting Shakespearean actor. They also paid flattering praise to his company and production.

"The demand for Shakespeare this year is unparalleled. After four record breaking weeks in Chicago we have played to capacity houses in all the leading cities of the middle west and south."

Salem Couple Celebrate 57th Wedding Anniversary

A delightful family and neighborhood celebration was held on Wednesday at 915 South Twelfth street, when Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hudelson celebrated their 57th wedding anniversary. During the afternoon, the ladies of the Yew Park Circle, of the First Methodist church, gathered in for a very brief congratulatory remembrance, and a few other neighbors and friends came also, to make merry with the wedding partners. Dr. James Lisle gave a congratulatory address, and Mrs. Pearl Blackerby read an original poem of real merit.

In the evening the family had their annual home dinner. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Hudelson, there were their daughters, Mrs. Avis Johnson of Boise, Idaho and Miss Mabel Hudelson of Salem; their son, W. A. Hudelson of North Powder; Mr. Hudelson's sister, Mrs. Jennie Austin of Woodburn and grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Arch Hout, Beryl, Grace and Virginia Hoyt, and Bittner Hudelson, all of Salem.

Mr. Hudelson is a prominent member of Sedgwick Post, G. A. R., and a few years ago served in the Idaho legislature, before he came to Salem. The couple celebrated their golden wedding anniversary here in Salem seven years ago.

BOND MEASURE PASSES SENATE

Fireworks on When Moser and Joseph Have Disagreement

After a fire and brimstone argument in which Senator Moser passed the short and ugly word with adjective attached to Senator Joseph, the senate yesterday passed SB 215, which would place dealers in municipal bonds under the jurisdiction of the corporation commissioner. The bill was defeated a few days ago. It was then reconsidered and amended slightly and came up for third reading again today.

Moser charged that "the gentleman who presides over the executive office, pounded on the back by Bob Smith and a lobby of the investment bankers wrote a letter to the corporation commissioner demanding that the commissioner see that legislation such as provided in SB 215 was prepared, notwithstanding the commissioner had said the bill would disrupt the blue sky law."

Moser read the letter as published in the newspapers. Moser declared the governor was under the influence of "the smooth and oily Bob Smith." He declared the bond trust was trying to pass the bill "to put Morris Brothers, their chief competitors out of the way and punch a hole in the blue sky law, so they won't be so closely regulated."

Moser charged that Corporation Commissioner Crews, under pressure of governor, had written a letter to Senator Eddy "putting a half-hearted OK on the bill."

"I asked the corporation commissioner this morning," continued Moser, "whether passage of this bill would put Morris Brothers out of business, and he replied: 'I will cross that bridge when I get to it. I am not now prepared to say.'"

Senator Staples said he looked at the bill as a "plan of the big fellows to put the little fellows out of business."

He declared about 800 stockholders, whom he termed poor people, were interested in Morris Brothers and that the bill would injure them.

Moser had attacked the amendments made in the bill. Eddy defending the bill declared these were prepared in the corporation commissioner's office and merely straightened out an ambiguity relative to the distinction between "dealers" and "brokers."

Eddy declared the bill necessary in Oregon because of a peculiar nature of municipal bonds issued in Idaho and Washington which may be issued from unsubstantial boom districts and sold in Oregon.

Eddy said that Roy Fike, the Morris Brothers lobbyist had been unable to point out anything in the bill that would hurt Morris Brothers, and Eddy declared further that he had been told by the corporation commissioner that the bill would not prevent the issuance of a license to the Morris organization.

Senator Maglady said he had opposed the bill when it was up the first time because he believed it would injure innocent purchasers in Morris Brothers, but that he would favor the bill in the amended form.

Senator Joseph peeled the skin from the Morris Brothers lobbyists, referring to Roy Fike as the chauffeur for John L. Etheridge when Etheridge fled from the country to allow the defunct Morris Brothers to tumble to ruin. Joseph dropped a remark that Moser interpreted as an intimation that he had received money for his fight against the bill.

"If you are saying that I received money you are a damn liar," Moser said deliberately as he arose and leveled his finger at Joseph.

Joseph continued his exhortation of the Morris Brothers lobby and declared that Moser himself had favored the bill until Fike showed up.

Senator Hare took the stand that the bill would simply require bond houses to hew to the line of integrity. Hare threw a bomb shell into the senate when he read a letter from A. M. Fanning, chairman of the board of trustees of the preferred stockholders, urging that the bill pass and declaring the belief of the stockholders "that the representations of the officers and employes are not in good faith."

Senator Staples continued with another telegram, signed by James C. Cunningham, president of the Morris Brothers corporation, repudiating Fanning as having no authority.

The vote was:
Ayes—Brown, Corbett, Dunn, Eddy, Edwards, Ellis, Garland, Hare, Joseph, La Follett, Maglady, Nickelson, Robertson, Strayer, Taylor, Tooze, Zimmerman.

Noes—Clark, Dennis, Farrell, Fisk, Johnson, Kinney, Klepper, Moser, Rittner, Smith, Staples, Upton.

Absent—Hall.

THREE BILLS GET GOVERNOR'S VETO

Reclassification and Assessment of Cut-over Timber Meets Defeat.

Three house bills were vetoed by Governor Pierce yesterday and the emergency clause of a fourth bill was stricken out by the executive's order.

The most important measure to meet with disaster probably was house bill 144, recommended by the state tax investigation commission and introduced by the joint committee on assessment and taxation, relating to the reclassification and assessment of cut-over timber lands.

In his veto message Governor Pierce explained that in his opinion the bill was ambiguous, despite the fact that it deals with an entirely new subject; that it would lead to a great deal of litigation; it places too much power in the hands of the state forester and would relieve private owners of timber lands from the payment of taxes during the period of reforestation and timber growth.

Other bills vetoed were H. B. 22, by Bennet, originally intended to repeal the law requiring assessors to list agricultural and horticultural lands, but amended to still require that small fruit lands be listed; house bill 252, Schulerich, prohibiting the moving of derricks more than sixteen feet in height under power lines without permits and the emergency clause of house bill 158, by Fletcher and Hurd, appropriating $600 for the G. A. R. of Oregon.
