Coming Friday— "Rags to Riches."

why is its message universal? The answer to these questions is given in "Rags to Riches," the Harry Rapf production sponsored by Warner Brothers, which is announced for a run of two days at the Oregon and Grand theatres beginning Friday.

Freckled, intangible Wes will be remembered by all who saw him in "School Days." He typifies the unconquerable spirit of youth and its adventurous strain which he always succeeds in communicating to his audience.

A great racing scene, thousands of frenzied spectators in the towering grandstands, the hair-raising dead heat finish, the jockeys weighing in before the big event, the crowded betting ring where thousands of dollars are changing hands, the paddock where the sleek thoroughbreds are groomed before being called to the starting post, the desperate flight in an aeroplane by "Hobbie" Morton, the heroine, to the side of her wounded brother in a hospital; her breakneck dash in an automobile to the race track and her brilliant and daring ride on "Albert" in the cup race—all these and many other big episodes combine in making "Queen of the Turf," a racing drama rarely equalled in the annals of the motion picture screen. At the Bligh theatre today.

"Maggie and Jiggs at Newport" is the title of the bill to be presented by the Macy and Baird comedians at the Bligh theatre Thursday and Friday nights. The title tells the whole story.

Why is it that the appeal of the theme of a boy's rise from rags to riches is eternal and undying, having a powerful hold on young and old alike? And

An ugly cut? MENTHOLATUM is antiseptic and gently helps the healing.

In the photodramatic version of Sir Hall Caine's great novel, "The Christian," which comes to the Oregon theatre on Sunday for four days, Maurice Tourneur has demonstrated in no uncertain way the wisdom of the Goldwyn company in selecting him to direct the production.

Mr. Dix, in the title role, is generally considered to have done the best work of his career before the camera. Mae Busch, as Glory Quayle, has to be seen to be appreciated. Others in the great cast are Gareth Hughes, Phyllis Haver, Cyril Chadwick, Mahlon Hamilton, Joseph Wolington, Claude Gillingwater, John Herdman, Beryl Mercer, Robert Bolder, Millia Davenport, Alice Hesse, Aileen Pringle, Harry Northrup, Eric Mayne, and William Moran.

Did Robin Hood ever live? He is said by some, to have been born at Locksley, Nottinghamshire, about the year 1160.

In the more thrilling days of his career, he lived in the woods with his band, either for reasons of his own or because he was really outlawed, his haunts being chiefly Sherwood Forest and Barnsdale in Yorkshire. The most generally accepted theory is that he was the Earl of Huntingdon incognito by circumstances over which he had no control. He was generous to a fault as well as adventurous to a dangerous degree, for he robbed the rich to give to the poor. His companions were Friar Tuck, Little John, Will Scarlet, Allan-a-Dale and George-a-Grigg. Douglas Fairbanks will be seen soon at The Oregon in the screen version of "Robin Hood."

A bronze statue of George Washington which has been on view at the national capital for 70 years has had to be taken down for repairs. No wonder that life at the capital is hard on our great men if a bronze Washington wears out in 70 years. Uncle Joe Cannon was a wonder to hang on for more than half a century.

I often meet people with absurd notions; but I have ceased trying to disabuse them; for I can offer nothing of which I am myself certain to take their place. One can destroy the weeds by covering the ground with salt, but the soil remains barren.—Exchange.

So far no enthusiastic Oregonian has claimed that he knew King "Tut" when a boy in the Valley of the Kings. But it is a bit early.

COMING

WILL BE COSTLY TO MOVE VESSEL

General White Receives Official Figures From Admiral Hoogewerff.

Unless the government will pay the bill of putting the famous battleship Oregon into condition for exhibition, it became apparent yesterday that the famous old vessel is beyond the reach of the state under appropriations made by the last legislature.

Official figures asked for recently by Adjutant General George A. White were received yesterday by that official from Rear Admiral John A. Hoogewerff, commander of the Bremerton navy yard where the Oregon is now located.

State Money for Maintenance
These figures show that it will cost $47,350 to put the ship into condition for the trip to Portland harbor under her own steam, or it will cost a minimum of $14,600 to put the ship into condition for exhibition purposes, not including the cost of towing her into the Willamette with the use of navy tugs. The appropriation made by the state and which becomes available in May for the current year is $15,000. That amount, according to General White, is for maintenance in Portland harbor and in his opinion cannot properly be paid out for making repairs at Bremerton.

"Besides," the adjutant general said, "it was distinctly understood that every effort should be made to have the vessel at least partly self-supporting, and I know it to be the policy of Governor Pierce to make every effort in that direction. It is plain that we cannot spend $14,600 of this year's appropriation for overhauling the boat at Bremerton, and it is up to the navy department to set aside the funds for turning the ship over to the state in at least presentable condition. In its present condition the Oregon would be an elephant on the state's hands."

Sealing and Painting Needed

That the navy department will scale and paint the ship and put her in shape for presentation to the state was the opinion expressed by General White, who will communicate at once with the navy department, giving the details of what is needed. Admiral Hoogewerff wrote that he had sent his estimates to the navy department March 15.

"I know that the navy department wants the historic ship preserved and has been holding her for Oregon," said General White. "When in Washington in 1920 Admiral Koontz, then chief of staff, told me he would recommend that the Oregon be sent to Portland harbor as a training ship for naval reservists. That plan was favored by the chiefs of operations, navigation, and naval reserves, but was recommended against later by northwest naval reservist officials in favor of a light-draft training boat which, accordingly, was sent to Portland harbor in place of the Oregon and is still there."

Appearance Changed
Admiral Hoogewerff's letter points out that in addition to the expense of $47,350 for bringing the Oregon here in proper condition ed by order of the board of governors after the market closed. This action being taken with the approval of attorneys for Clarence Saunders, president of the Piggly Wiggly company, who is reported to have demanded delivery of 48,000 shares of stock.

The erratic gyrations in this issue naturally caused some unsettlement in the balance of the list, but a good demand for the independent steel, textile and some of the rails eventually sent prices upward again.

Baldwin, Studebaker and some of the other popular favorites closed fractionally lower. Sale of a block of 10,000 shares of Southern Railway at 35, up 1/4, featured the trading group, other changes in which were of an irregular and fractional character. Call money opened at 5 per cent and advanced to 5 1/2 in the late afternoon, closing at that figure. The time money and commercial paper markets were quiet with no change in rates.

Strength of francs, which crossed 6.50 cents for the first time in several weeks, was again the feature of the foreign exchange market. Sterling was reactionary, demand bills being quoted at $4.69, or approximately a cent below yesterday's ruling rate. Slight improvement was noted in Canadian exchange.

LANDERS SPEAKS AT HIGH SCHOOLS

President of State Normal in Series of Addresses Sponsored by YMCA.

J. S. Landers, president of Oregon Normal school at Monmouth, is spending two days in Marion county addressing high school students under the auspices of the county YMCA organization. In all he will address about 1000 students.

Yesterday President Landers spoke at the high schools of Woodburn, Hubbard and Gervais in the forenoon, at Jefferson in the afternoon and at the state training school for boys last night. At the training school special music and readings were added to the program by students from the public speaking department of Willamette university. The county YMCA takes entertainments to the training school every second Tuesday and conducts Bible classes at the school regularly each week.

Today President Landers will speak at Stayton, Aumsville and Turner in the forenoon, at Silverton in the afternoon and at the Chemawa Indian school tonight.

President Landers' subject is "What Is Under Your Hat? or a Lesson in Psychology." His appeal is for development first of the brain, then the mind and then the personality. Within all, he shows, is a spark of the divine flame that may be called God. A certain period each day for intense study, President Landers says, is necessary for success. The youths who hear him President Landers urges to decide what vocation they wish to follow in life, then picture themselves as successful in that work and success will be theirs.

It seems that in France there is only one divorce to 13 marriages. We can do better than that in this country. In some sections we have worked it out so fine that every other wedding is good for a divorce. But if every 13th marriage in France ends in a divorce are we to assume that 13 is an unlucky number?

PIGGY WIGGLY STOCK CHANGES

Violent Fluctuations Result of Apparent Squeezing of "Short" Interest.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Chief interest in today's stock centered in the extremely violent fluctuations of Piggly Wiggly stock, which opened at 75 1/2, jumped to 124 and then dropped back to 82, ten points above last night's close, in response to the apparent squeezing of the "short" interests. Trading in the stock was suspended.
