Four acts Hippodrome Vaudeville. Pauline Starke in "Salvation Nell."

The marvelous Deonzo and Co. is the headline attraction on the four act vaudeville show opening at the Bligh theatre today, presenting his spectacular, bottle-jumping novelty which has never been seen before as Deonzo & Co. are the only artists in the world doing this sensational feat. Boise and Carey, a duo of talented young ladies, present a singing and dancing number full of snap. Critchley and Dodge present a laughable comedy "Don't Touch Me." Dudley Gordon is a quaint little fellow that laughs and dances his way through life.

Application for an insurance policy for $50,000 has been made by William Fox on the life of "Tony," the famous horse belonging to Tom Mix, the robust star appearing in "Tom Mix in Arabia" at the Grand theatre.

The insurance order was given to a New York broker, who in turn placed it through his British correspondent, with Lloyds, London.

The Fox studios are now producing a picture at a cost of approximately $250,000, in which "Tony" has an important part. "Tony" has been appearing in motion picture productions for a number of years and has won unusual popularity. At all times sharing in the honors bestowed upon the star, which has added greatly to his value, according to opinions advanced in the insurance application.

The insurance application is made to cover the death of "Tony" by accident or natural causes within one year, by which time the picture will have been completed.

Pauline Starke will be seen in one of her very best offerings, "Salvation Nell" at the Bligh theatre today and tomorrow.

Mae Murray has done the best work of her photoplay career in her latest Metro picture, "Jazzmania," presented by Robert A. Leonard at the Oregon theatre, where it was seen for the first time yesterday. The amazing versatility of this gifted screen star was never more fully evidenced than in this film, and it is by all odds the most popular and entertaining of her pictures.

"Jazzmania" has everything in it. As a matter of fact, it is more than one photoplay. It has its background for the most part in the colorful kingdom of Jazzmania, a tiny Balkan principality. It shifts to Paris for a while; then to the Casino at Monte Carlo, and finally to New York. Spectacular scenes follow each other with incredible swiftness, and no sooner has one glimpsed a scene of rare beauty than another is flashed on the screen in its stead. "Jazzmania" is really a New York Hippodrome of film-dom.

SAYS LEAGUE ISSUE NEXT PROBLEM

discouraged today as he had never seen them before—to the point of despair.

Crash May Come

"They are going forward with characteristic British pluck," he quoted his informant as saying, "but they see no light ahead and fear that the crash may come at any time which will involve all Europe and the British empire in financial and social ruin."

"It is easier to imagine than to describe what the situation of our country would be," Justice Clarke declared, if the British empire should disappear from the world, carrying as it would, France down with it and thus involving all Europe and Britain in the economic and social demoralization and despair in which Germany, Russia and Asia Minor are today.

"And yet our government stands aloof, in suspicion and fear, as if it were contamination even to touch the league of nations which is the only hope for such a union."

President Harding, he continued, "after plodding himself in the most solemn manner" to "advise and enter some association of nations to promote the peace of the world," has failed for half his term to "do anything but resort to a limited alliance with a few powers to deal with the problems of the Pacific but which touches not at all the crisis on the Atlantic which threatens to overwhelm the world."

Later he referred to the president's request that the senate advise and consent to the negotiation of a treaty making America a party to the international court of justice, as "signs that daylight is breaking in the longitude of Washington."

"Let us hope," he added, "that it is not the phantom of false dawn but a real coming of the light."

He criticized the president, however, for asking the senate to "advise and consent" to an unmade treaty instead of sending that body a completed treaty and asking for its ratification.

"The executive should avoid even the beginning of the evil of surrender to the senate in this grave matter," he said, "but the senatorial mind is always ponderous and slow to act, and so it has taken six months to think over this request, which should have been granted by a viva voce vote, without debate."

Mrs. Mary J. Royal Dies At Home of Her Daughter

Mrs. Mary J. Royal, for many years a resident of Salem, died Thursday night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rev. W. Skipworth, in Portland. The funeral service is to be held in Portland Monday, and the body is to be brought back to Salem Tuesday at 1 o'clock, on the Oregon Electric train for burial beside her late husband, Charles F. Royal, in Jason Lee cemetery.

The Royals were of the pioneer stock in Salem. They were old-timers, as long as 40 years ago. Mr. Royal was a bridge builder, and the family were prominent in church and social work in Salem. One daughter, Mrs. Williams, went to Washington, where she has been connected with the department of agriculture for many years. Another daughter married Rev. Mr. Skipworth, pastor of one of the Methodist churches in Portland, and it was at her home that the mother died. The Royals formerly lived in East Salem. They were well known to all the early settlers in this part of Oregon. Mr. Royal died several years ago.

CROWDS ATTEND INDUSTRY SHOW

All Exhibits Now in Place and Big Crowd Is Looked for Today

Good crowds of people have been attending the Made-in-Salem exposition at the PRL & P company office on North Liberty street. The exhibits are all in place, and yesterday the visitors could see the whole show.

The comment is very general that "I didn't know they made such things as that in Salem." This reference being made to almost one-half of the products shown. There's lots of interesting stuff shown; articles that have plugged away in a quiet, matter-of-fact way, getting good orders and building up a permanent business without even the closest neighbors realizing that they are really commercial manufacturers.

The electric light company has had this show in mind for more than a year, and has worked hard

Mysterious Prune Blight Is Studied Exhaustively

The mysterious prune blight which baffled investigators last year, has again made its appearance in and near Salem. A number of orchards are said to be badly affected and experts in plant diseases are expected to arrive from the agricultural college today.

They will work with Percy Brothers in an effort to find a remedy. The orchards which have been hit by the blight will be made the subject of exhaustive study.

While the blight struck at different times in the prune development last year, it is affecting the prune just as the buds formed this year and the buds affected drop off.
