Bonus Commission Attempts to Keep State's Losses at Minimum

The ex-service men's state aid commission is trying to overcome the tendency among the appraisal boards in some counties of the state to over-value property on which state loans are made to ex-service men, according to Governor Pierce. The governor, Adjutant General White and Secretary of State Kozer, all members of the commission, were in Linn county Thursday where they viewed about 20 properties on which loans have been made. They yere accompanied by the Linn county board of appraisal.

"There has been no fraud committed," said the governor, but there are cases where too high valuation has been placed on property. It is the duty of the commission to keep the state's loss as low as possible, and to do this the greatest care must be taken in making the appraisals. The loaning process has been going on only a little more than a year, and already there are four foreclosures and a number of cases of delinquency. There is nothing black at all in the situation, but caution is necessary."

Other counties are to be visited by the board.
