Coming With Her Own Company—Grand Theatre

MUSICAL tea to observe the opening of the music department of the Salem Public Library will be an event of general interest Friday afternoon. A delightful program with vocal numbers by Miss Lena Belle Tartar and Dr. John R. Sites and piano solos by Mrs. W. H. Burghardt will be given beginning at 4 o'clock.

The affair to which the public and especially the music loving public and the younger musicians are invited, will be given in the main room of the library upstairs. A grand piano will be in this room and some delightful music is promised by the committee in charge.

Mrs. John W. Harbison, member of the library board is in charge of the tea and the music committee of the library which is composed of Mrs. Burghardt, Miss Tartar and Dr. Sites is in general charge of the affair. Mrs. Burghardt is chairman of arrangements.

A most complete selection of classical music including scores for operas, oratorios and classical songs is included in the new department. The Willamette university string trio composed of Delbert Moore, Byron Arnold and Avery Hicks, will play during the afternoon.

HOLDING A HUSBAND

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

CHAPTER 285

THE WAGER DICKY MADE AND AT LAST WAS FORCED TO PAY.

Lillian cast a swift, furtive glance at me as Dicky airily suggested my looking for "two or three places close together" in order that the Durkees might move near us if the new neighbors should prove too unbearable. I knew that her thoughts had leaped to the same possibility as mine, that of Edith Fairfax continuing to live in my vicinity. But with Dicky's eyes upon me I gave no indication that I had caught her glance or that his suggestion either ruffled or interested me.

"I'll be glad to look out for them," I said sedately, "although from what Lillian tells me, I'm afraid we shall have to go far afield unless we take something inferior to the home here."

Dicky's jaw set stubbornly. "Well, if I can't get something as good or better than this I'll invest the money and we'll rent for awhile!"

"May I ask where?" Lillian interposed dryly. "I've been told that it's hard to get even a respectable chicken coop in which to set up light housekeeping."

"Oh, you'll hear that rot all over!" Dicky returned, with the incurable optimism of a man whose "women folk" are going to perform some task for him. "That's just a dodge of the real estate men. If you hunt around and don't let those slick suburban real estate pull wool over your eyes you'll find dozens of places."

Dicky's Requirements.
"Want to lay a little wager, Dickybird?" Lillian asked suddenly, and I knew by the flash in her eyes that she had evolved some scheme for effectually spiking Dicky's guns of censure and ridicule if we failed in our quest for a suitable home within commuting distance.

"Sure thing," Dicky grinned amiably. "Well, then, you furnish us a list of real estate agents in all the Long Island commuting towns."

"What the—, why, there are dozens of places I wouldn't live in if they paid me a thousand dollars a week to do it! Smug, new places, with every home like every other one—"

"Don't worry, nobody's going to pay you to live anywhere," Lillian drawled. "The paying is coming from the other direction. But your exclusiveness simplifies our problem. Limit your list to the communities you are willing to adorn with the light of your presence. Then Madge and I will agree to see each agent and interview each proprietor of the local newspaper, as well as snoop around a bit on our own. We will bring you back descriptions of every possible outlook—you can give us your requirements—and then if you wish you can go to see any favorable ones. If, when we have exhausted those, you make no selection, you must treat us to a dinner and a play. If you do secure one, we'll—"

"The Bet Is On."

"Buy me a perfectly, sweet knitted necktie or a cake of shaving soap," Dicky interrupted rudely. "But I'll go you, just for the sake of proving you mistaken. When do you want the list?"

"We'll stand you a dinner and a play of your own selection," Lillian went on imperturbably as if he hadn't spoken. "The list you may furnish us in installments if you wish, but the first, comprising any part of the Sound section that can be done by auto in a day, we want tomorrow morning. This afternoon we'll do Garden City and Westbury."

"Pretty big order for one afternoon, isn't it?" Dicky asked.

"Not with your requirements," Lillian returned promptly. "They eliminate all the small houses, and, of course, all the big estates. As I understand it, you want a ten or twelve-room house with an acre of ground."

"An acre at least," Dicky assented, "and fireplaces, and at least 50 years old. None of your modern stuff for me, unless, of course, it's a reproduction of the colonial."

Lillian smiled whimsically. "With those restrictions I think we'll not be overburdened with offerings in any locality," she said. "All right, Dicky-bird. The bet is on, then?"

Dicky made a ceremonious obeisance. "The bet is on," he repeated. "And don't you believe but what I'll hold you girls to your wager. I can taste that dinner now."

"No doubt you can," retorted Lillian. "But I'd advise you to settle aside something to settle the bill for it. There's about as much chance of our finding anything that will meet your requirements as there is of your being suited with it when we do find it."

Her prophecy was only too well fulfilled. For the next week we covered in the faithful car my father had given me every village Dicky had listed. We interviewed agents haughty and agents eager. We waded out the places which were out of the question, conscientiously inspected those which appeared to come near Dicky's requirements, and—the result of our quest was a list of three places which we drove Dicky to see, each of which he rejected with contumely.

"Well, I'll throw up my hands!" he said as we drove away from a village on the Sound which we had especially fancied, and which, to use his own expression, we had "fine-tooth-combed thoroughly," with his assistance—both Lillian and I insisted that he do one typical village himself in order to be convinced of conditions. "The places we want are way beyond the means of anybody but a war profiteer, and the places we can get, the devil wouldn't have. The dinner is on me, girls, but will anybody tell me where we're going to live?"

Suit for Collection of Balance Due Is Brought

Suit for $398, alleged to be the balance due for services rendered was filed by R. W. Weddie against W. A. Kothoff in circuit court yesterday.

According to the complaint Weddie performed services between December 18, 1920 and January 20, 1922, aggregating 323 1/2 days, valued at $4.50 per day. A total of $1493.75 was paid. The plaintiff asserts, but the balance has never been forthcoming. Judgment is asked for the above amount.

MRS. PRESNALL IS LONG IN SERVICE

Recent Appointee of Supt. Gilbert Well Acquainted With Duties

It will be nothing new for the boys of the Oregon Industrial school to find Mrs. Raleigh Presnall as matron in charge of their welfare. She was appointed to this position by Supt. Gilbert this week and is now serving officially. But she has held in effect this same relation to the school, or some other position that meant practically the same, for more than 20 years. She came to the school from Eugene, as a nurse; she and Mr. Presnall were married there 20 years ago and in the intervening years she has held almost every important position that a woman could fill in the school. In fact, if not in name, for her work has always been to help give the boys the home spirit that they have usually lacked in their own homes.

Mr. Presnall is at the head of the farm work for the school, as he was years ago. The two faithful, capable workers have stayed there, through all kinds of administrations, held by their wish to serve the boys who so greatly need capable friends. Their length of service has few equals in the northwest, in any kind of state institutions; and in this appointment as matron Mrs. Presnall merely adds an official name to the duties she has performed for so many years. There's many a boy who will remember with gratitude the "mother" he found in Mrs. Presnall in the days when he thought the world was against him and it wasn't worth while to turn over the new leaf and her care gave him a chance to keep straight.

STATE POLICY ON IRRIGATION UNDECIDED

posed to a sale of the bonds at this time. He said he represented 40,000 acres and about 40 owners.

"The people I represent," said McMahan, "are not opposed to irrigation, but they want it at a time when it will not absorb their homes. If the bonds are written now they say they will have to move off. You don't know whether the reservoir is going to hold water, and until you have tested it, I hold it is not business to sell the bonds, and it is not the way you would handle your own money."

Reservoir Held Safe
Mr. Cupper assured McMahan that the reservoir was out of danger.

Someone suggested that the bond brokers have the welfare of the people of the district at heart.

"The bond speculators," replied McMahan, "have about the same interest in the people that a buzzard has in a starving sheep that is struggling through the winter and wondering if it can survive until the grass of summer comes."

Cupper and Bramwell of the commission and President Cunningham of Morris Brothers engaged in a spirited three-cornered argument about the Morris Brothers proposal. Bramwell, questioning the financial ability of Morris Brothers, declared that "the commission does not propose to get into another jackpot like the Teal project, and will insist that you produce evidence that you can finance this project."

Cupper States Demands
"You have got to show that you are prepared to take the additional $2,500,000 of the $5,000,000 that it will cost to construct the project," added Cupper. He explained that it would not necessarily be obligatory for Morris Brothers to take the additional bonds. After Cunningham had stated the modifications that Morris Brothers might make in the contract he asked Cupper and Pierce if that would be satisfactory. Cupper reiterated his stand and the governor held out for more time, suggesting that the advisory committee should investigate and report to the commission. This duty was later placed on Cupper and Bramwell.

In the preceding general discussion Governor Pierce requested Guy Dobson appearing for Suttles lake, to write him a letter on the possible danger of overproduction as related to market possibilities.

Dr. W. C. Kantner Talks At Silverton Dedication
SILVERTON, Or., April 17.—(Special to The Statesman.)—About 300 people attended the dedication services at the new Congregational church at Silverton Sunday. Special services were held during the morning, afternoon and evening. C. H. Harrison, state superintendent of Congregational churches gave the dedication sermon during the afternoon session. During the morning Rev. J. S. Edmunds of Portland and Prof. Harold S. Tuttle of Pacific University had charge of the services.

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Daugherty of Salem gave an instrumental duet and Mrs. Moe, Mrs. Charles Meyers, and Mrs. H. Tschantz gave a trio. Besides the dedication sermon in the afternoon there were talks and prayers by Rev. J. A. Bennett of Silverton, Dr. H. L. Bates and Dr. J. D. McCormick of Salem; vocal solos by Mrs. Harry Zelsdorf and Alvin Mead. Dr. W. C. Kantner of Salem gave the evening sermon.

Alfred Fox Gets Decree Of Divorce From Spouse
That Alfred Fox was entitled to a divorce decree from his wife, Joyce Fox, was ruled by Judge George Bingham in the circuit court yesterday. Custody of the three minor children is also given to the plaintiff.

Fox alleged that his wife had deserted him and their three children October 21, 1921. The Foxes were married February 25, 1908.

SHRINE OUTLAY SAID TO BE VAST

Professional Caterer Will Care for Crowds Due Here May Fifth

To serve the visiting Shriners at the Shrine Ceremonial in Salem, May 5, will require 18,000 pieces of crockery—and that doesn't count fingerbowls or bone dishes or any society stuff. It will require 15,000 pieces of cutlery, without orange spoons or pickle forks or metallic toothpicks or anything but the plainest tools of the trade.

One meal is estimated to require 3,000 pounds of chicken; 30 gallons of cream; two cases of eggs for the cooking, and not even a shell for the Easter-egg gourmand to eat whole; two full 100-pound sacks of coffee that has to be shipped 3,000 miles expressly for their royal Arabian use; two barrels of cream; 600 dozen rolls, 200 pounds of pickled crab meat; 3,000 glasses for water alone; and food and eatables and provender and things to eat until the trucks tire themselves on the job.

They thought they'd have it in the army, and then they knew they wouldn't for the army isn't half big enough. They have secured the great Traglo, warehouse on South Liberty street, with three floors if they need them all, 150 feet square. It makes an acre and a half of total floor space, if they want to use it all. The building will be finished within a few days, so that it will be available, and they promise to give it a full camel-and-burning-sands initiation. Henry Thiels of Portland, a professional caterer, has been engaged to herd the feeders. He was in charge of the eats at the Bonson hotel. He knows what crowds are and what they eat. He can serve a Shriners dinner that will look like a million dollars a plate. He will bring five carloads of trained help from Portland, and two cars of equipment. The Shriners are to furnish nothing a-tall but the appetites.

Shriners' wives are to be entertained in other ways; just how they are to be apportioned in the city has not yet been made public. It is understood that a call for the opening of homes will have to be made, as there may be from 1000 up to even 2000 wives and daughters and sweethearts to care for.

Salem is getting a vast amount of advertising from this elaborate Ceremonial. For this week, the local committee is sending out the gorgeous programs, not only to all Shriners in Oregon, but to armies of camel-riders in other states. "Come to Salem and see the Shrine Shine" is the spirit of the invitations, and they expect an instant and liberal response to the call.

Check to Check Stepping Is Under Ban at School
CHENEY, Wash., April 17.—"Check-to-check" dancing and other dances of that character are under the ban at the state normal school at Cheney, according to rules adopted by the student dance committee.

Social isolation upon those who persist in violating regulations. "The Thursday evening play hour is maintained to afford wholesome amusement, and to learn to dance correctly," says Dean Speath. To leave these dances as much as possible in students' hands, a student committee has been named. Its duties are to serve as a floor committee, to arrange music for the play hour, and to call attention to faulty dancing.

"A student notified that his or her dancing is faulty will be called before the committee and instructed," says Dean Speath. "If the offense is repeated, the offender's name will be posted on the bulletin board. The second offense will result in the person being ousted from school dances."

Oakland Library Books Are 684 Years Overdue
OAKLAND, Calif., April 17.—Books were held overdue 684 years, 10 months and 10 days from the Oakland public library in the year 1922, according to an announcement issued by the department of fines. The figures are based on the total of $5,000 in fines collected during the year at the rate of two cents a day for books held overtime. The amount represents 250,000 days.
