on and the audience hugged the stove and kept the home fires burning. The pony and dog acts were as good last night as they were the first time. They are really clever, and whoever believes that dogs are mere machines to wind up with a crank and then have them kick and back and break an arm, or collide and throw a person through a plate glass window has 'em dead wrong. They don't do it; they bark and play at their work and enjoy it. A loving little spotted terrier or a pompadoured Sheltie that can think looks like living once more. The child under 60 years of age who doesn't see these educated animals, has missed a real thrill.

temple who was fatally beaten and choked in a hotel room recently. Clarence B. Hicks, naval seaman, who is charged with murder in connection with Rabbi Lafee's death was present throughout the inquest, but did not testify.

WEATHER IS BAD FOR MEET TODAY

Clash of Salem High and Athletes Appears Much in Doubt
The weather at midnight was anything but promising for the proposed track and baseball meet at Willamette field this afternoon between Salem high school and Salem Indian school.

Just what the Indians have this year has not been made public, as they have had no competitive meets, and the Salem critics have not seen them at work. They have always presented some capable performers, however, and are not expected to fall down this year. It is believed that they will have some excellent distance men. Their sprinters are not expected to be quite as good as the local men.

Two of the former Indian students, Lilligren and Morgan, are in Salem high, and are among the best track men on the local squad. Lilligren is a sprinter, and Morgan looks like a regular greyhound for the distance events. H. Post and L. Post are counted on as two of the best local sprint prospects, with Fallin, Moorman and Draper also formidable competitors.

Last year, Salem had one of the best high school distance runners ever developed in the state—Alvin Lennon. He was graduated from the school, and has no known successor, though Morgan looks as good—physically.

The field is bound to be soggy, because of the rain but with a fair morning, it would dry out enough to make an interesting event.

SHALE OIL FIRM MUST PAY STATE

Penalty of Hundred Dollars Daily Assessed by Jackson County Court

The Hartman Syndicate of the Pacific coast must pay the state a penalty of $100 daily for each day since it began operating in Oregon, under a decree of the lower court for Jackson county, handed down by Judge C. M. Thomas, and received by Attorney General Van Winkle yesterday. This is the company organized to extract oil from shale rock in Southern Oregon, and the state brought suit against the company on allegations that it was doing a trust business without being organized in the manner the law requires and selling stock without a permit.

The company was organized in the state September 18, 1922, but the penalty payments probably will not date back that far. Individuals mentioned as defendants connected with the company are H. W. Hartman, James Barrett, W. J. West, W. A. Pettigrew, Guy Shrug, Cecil Shrug and R. A. Blayden.
