FRESHMEN TAKE INTERCLASS MEET

Upperclass Athletes Show Little Ability in Willamette Events

The freshmen romped off with practically the whole show in the interclass track and field meet at Willamette university Tuesday afternoon.

The upperclassmen thought it was still winter, and their feet were cold and their ears tingled and their joints ached and their shoes didn't fit and their hearts were weak and their souls were wool-gathering in practically every field but athletics. They made a rotten showing against the ambitious freshmen. There wasn't enough courage in the two upper classes to spell with a little letter.

Zeller went into three events, and won second place in each, making nine points. Sken won first in the javelin throw, and Markers entered one of the runs, though he did not succeed in placing. For the juniors the showing was even more lamentable. Satchwell won first place in the quarter mile, and second in the 220, making eight points; and that's all. Beyond that, the two upper classes were a total and abysmal loss in courage and everything.

Some interesting contests were staged in the various events, however, with these few courageous and successful upperclassmen and the enthusiastic freshmen and sophomores. The sprints went generally to the upper ranks. The distance runs were in every event to the freshmen—though this might be partly because the old-timers, the grandpas, the half and the lame and the crippled aristocrats of the higher classes wouldn't take a chance on the more grueling contests.

The half-mile relay that closed the day was the thriller of the meet. It was won by the freshmen, with Wright in the lead on the last lap, followed closely by Ponsay, sophomore, and Zeller, senior. Stolzeise, on the third lap, had given his freshman flatterer a lead that couldn't be made by, though both the other last runners closed up the gap somewhat.

In the two-mile run, Rawson Chapin, sophomore, got a great head for sticking to his run and winning third place, though more than a lap behind. It wasn't really much of a run for speed, but it was about the finest thing of the day in its courage—that and Brock in the mile run, who looked away and finished and wouldn't quit. They put a real "kick" into the whole meet, for those who appreciated moral gameness and determination rather than mere agile legs.

Wright and Satchwell ran a great race for the quarter, until the last few yards, when Wright in the lead at the start of the stretch, he tripped or collapsed, and Satchwell finished first. Satchwell has trained very little this year, and ran an excellent race.

Stolzeise, freshman, was the chief point winner of the day by a wide margin. He captured first in the shot-put, first in the broad jump, first in the discus, third in the javelin, third in the 100-yards, and ran in the winning relay team, 17 points in all, besides the undivided relay honor. Freeman, freshman, had nine points; Zeller, senior, had nine, and helped to make one point in the relay. Bonney, freshman, had 13 points, and a part in the relay. Satchwell, junior, had eight points.

The two-mile race, while not very fast, gave a real thrill at the finish. Haines and Atkinson, freshmen, had saved enough stuff to make it a genuine sprint for the last 300 yards. It was as pretty a finish to a distance race as two runners ever put up.

From the material showing up, if the freshmen and sophomores keep up their heart as they promise to do, Willamette has a good chance to give any of the independent colleges a good beating. If the lower classmen should desert, as did the higher-ups, Willamette wouldn't get even started.

The summary:
100 yards—Bonney '25, Zeller '25, Stolzeise '26.
