

DESCHUTES POWER TO BE DEVELOPED

Columbia Valley Company Asks Board to Fix Time for Completion

The Columbia Valley Power company, in an application filed with the state water board, requests that a time be fixed for the completion of its proposed power developments on the Deschutes river.

Not long ago the Columbia Valley Power company secured a preliminary permit from the federal power commission to develop power at two points on the Deschutes, known as the Pelton and the Metolius power sites. Water rights for this development were initiated in 1908 and have been in litigation and held before the federal power commission since that time.

The application filed with the state water board shows that the company proposes to utilize 3500 second feet of the waters of the Deschutes river with a fall at the Metolius site of 210 feet and a fall of 80 feet at the Pelton site, developing at Metolius 35,000 horsepower and at Pelton 25,000 horsepower.

The preliminary power permit issued by the federal commission to the Columbia Valley Power company carried a provision that such development should not interfere with irrigation on the upper river," said Percy A. Cupper, state engineer.

In order to meet this requirement, the application now before the state water board is made subject to any storage or diversion for irrigation purposes above Odin falls on the Deschutes river, with the understanding that not to exceed 1500 acres of land shall be irrigated north of Crooked and Metolius rivers from such diversions, and also that not to exceed 75,000 acres shall be irrigated from Crooked and Metolius rivers, and from Deschutes river between Odin falls and the Metolius power site.

These areas are considerably in excess of any present contemplated irrigation development, and probably considerably in excess of any irrigation requirements from these streams.

The proposed development is one of the most extensive ever considered in this state, and must of necessity bring with it substantial industrial development in the state in order that this large quantity of power be marketed. A number of filings have been made in the office of the state engineer covering these power sites, which have been held awaiting the outcome of the contest before the federal power commission for the necessary rights of way. These applications are being notified of the request of the Columbia Valley Power company, in order that they may have an opportunity to be heard before the application of the power company is acted upon. The irrigation interests in the upper Deschutes valley, which may be indirectly affected by the application, are also being notified.

Carrie H. Chapel Files Suit Against R. F. Axley

Suit was filed by Carrie H. Chapel against Rollo F. Axley, as an individual and administrator of the estate of J. F. Axley in the circuit court yesterday.

According to the complaint Rollo Axley was appointed administrator of the estate of J. F. Axley in April, 1922. In September, 1921, however, it appears that promissory notes were given to the plaintiff by Rollo and J. F. Axley to the amount of $1000, payable February 24, 1922. With the exception of $35 interest money, nothing was ever paid on the notes, the plaintiff asserts.

In May, 1922, the plaintiff delivered the notes to the defendant for inspection but they were never returned, the complaint asserts. In January, 1923, the defendant rejected the claim of the plaintiff that the notes should be allowed.

There is a surplus of assets over liabilities in the final account of the estate, according to the complaint, and the defendant is well able to pay the notes.
