BRITISH TRADE IS INCREASING

Representative of Oregon Growers' London Brokers Visits in Salem

There has been a marked increase in the consumption of dried fruit in the British Isles that promises well for the trade from this country, according to C. H. M. Willson, of Alexander Creighton & Co., brokers of London, who was here yesterday discussing the trade situation with the Oregon Growers' Cooperative association. The Creighton company is broker for the Oregon Growers' in the British Isles. Prior to coming here, Mr. Willson spent some time in California.

"We have been through a trade depression since September and October," said Mr. Willson, in touching on the dried fruit outlook in the islands. "A large amount of Bosnian prunes has been sold into England at very low prices. These prunes have a good keeping quality during the winter months but they easily go out of condition in warm weather. This fact, coupled with the fact that the Bosnian crop is practically sold out, rather puts that prune off the market for the time being."

"There are quite a number of Oregon and California prunes in the wholesalers' hands in London, in fact the last report available shows 75,000 of the 25 pound boxes in the dealers hands there. "Oregon and California Prunes sell for from 16 to 20 cents there as compared to 9 cents a pound for the Bosnian prunes. There is a heavy duty on prunes, running a little over 2 cents a pound on the 112 pound shipments. "The Mistland prune has sold very well, indeed in England. In fact we are having buyers who who have bought in large quantities, finding a ready market. "We also are watching with interest the possibilities in the shipment of frozen strawberries. A large shipment of these was recently made and we hope to develop a good business along these lines."
