ROTARIANS DO MUCH BUSINESS Various Subjects Discussed by Club Members at Yesterday's Luncheon

President Snelling called yesterday housecleaning day for the Rotary club. Among the subjects discussed were the earwig menace, the playgrounds and the Salem hospital.

Otto Paulus appeared in behalf of the Chautauqua, representing that this institution was of great benefit to Salem as a desirable educational and amusement institution, and should be supported by the public.

The club went behind the Salem children's playgrounds 100 per cent strong, and assessed the members to raise $125 as the club's share in the enterprise. George Arbuckle was appointed representative of the club on the governing board.

F. G. Deckeback and T. B. Kay made appeals in behalf of the Salem hospital, and a motion was passed pledging the entire membership of the club to cooperate with the other luncheon organizations of the city in putting on a drive to raise $35,000 to complete the building.

"The earwig is a real menace to the people of Salem," declared Charles A. Parks. It has already appeared in a number of lots in Salem, and if not systematically and vigorously fought, will become a mighty unpleasant pest.

Seattle and Portland have both been hard hit, and are now spending considerable money in an effort to stamp out the pest. The earwig comes from Europe, and was first found in this country in Seattle. It spread in the Queen Anne fashionable residence district, and property rapidly decreased in value, a great many families moving out in a body, but an organized fight was made by the city against it, and in two years has been very effective in stamping it out in that district.

Last year Mr. Park estimated that the earwig cost the city $50,000. You give Layton your note, due in 60 days. When the note matures, Layton tells you he will allow it to run 90 days longer. A very ordinary situation, one that has happened many times. We try to prepare our students so that they will know just what they should do in this and other cases of a like nature. Every subject we teach applies in a practical way to business life.

New classes will start Monday, June 18. Write or call for information. Capital Business College Salem, Oregon High and Ferry

Portland could have made a successful fight against the earwig for $6000, but this year twice that amount is required. Oregon Agricultural college has developed a poison that is very effective in killing the insects and ridding entire districts of them.

S. H. Van Trump, county fruit inspector, is in charge of the fight for Salem, and any evidence of earwig should be reported to him. Mr. Park advised against any individual effort to fight the pest, as it is necessary to cover an entire block at one time, the insects travel so rapidly.

Mr. Park described the bug of a deep brown color, one-half inch long. It infests the doorways, lawns and trees, enters houses, crawls into the beds, into boxes and refrigerators, into the meat, butter, and any other eatables. It devours any vegetable matter, and destroys fruit crops. It hides in the day time and crawls rapidly at night. In infested districts a house may be literally covered with them at night, and none found in the day time.
