has been having a session of evil days. The other two are his friends, "Mugs," and "Gilly," and they urge him to join them in a "job." He refuses.

In the first act, Joe's mother is seen to be in danger of losing her farm to the village Shylock. Joe comes in but can do nothing. However, his friends appear by a coincidence, and finally save the situation for a few minutes by robbing a safe, paying the Shylock's bill, and then picking his pocket in order to return the money to the safe. The next morning, after several other efforts have failed, the men hit upon the scheme of selling peach jam, made by Joe's mother, to a New York firm. The temporary financier is "Sammy," a former clerk in the village store, who takes a broad comedy role, but who shows decided business acumen. Meanwhile the three men become interested in three of the girls, Jane, an old flame of Joe's, one sister of Joe, and the third a neighbor girl. The scheme proves to be a sound one, and Joe is found to be innocent of the crime of which he had been accused. The last act a year and a half later shows all the characters happy and wealthy, and on the way to further happiness with wives and husbands.

Jests Are Divided. The jests are divided among several characters, the most clever ones being given to Mugs, the versatile and ingenious crook, formerly a pickpocket. His clever side comments were almost the funniest parts of the play. "Sammy," the clerk is also good, but he earns his laughs more by being ridiculous than by being clever.

The play shows a triumph of honesty, inspired by the wonderful character of Joe's mother, who reforms everyone who comes near her, except the villain, and even he is believed to have reformed by the end of the play.

Chinese Orator Tonight

Tonight, Dr. Ng Poon Chew, Chinese-American orator and editor, is to speak. He is rated as one of the keenest observers and wittiest speakers on the American platform today. He was educated in one of the American mission schools, and finally adopted America for good. His son was the first and only Chinese to receive a United States army commission in the World war. One daughter is a school teacher in Oakland, and another daughter is a nurse. Dr. Ng Poon Chew will speak on "Chinese and the Future Peace of the Pacific," a profoundly interesting subject to those who have been dreaming dreams of the Yellow Peril that they believe exists in the Orient, and that they see having covetous designs on America.

Week Is Promising

With the prediction of the weather bureau that the weather is going to be good, and with the program carrying so many delightful-looking offerings of amusement, of music, of lectures and of great world stories that thrill the imagination like the Skeyhill story of Russia, the Chautauqua seems set for the biggest week in its history. Last night the ticket sale had already run $150 above the original guarantee, so that the local sponsors are in the clear and the Chautauqua is sailing in safe financial waters. The unparalleled attendance last night indicates an interest that fairly astounds the committee. They said so, between gasps of amazement, last night as the crowd continued to pour in.

DALLAS PEOPLE SEE CHAUTAUQUA
Season Opens in Polk County Seat With "Turn to the Right" Play

DALLAS, Or., June 19.—(Special to The Statesman.)—The Dallas Chautauqua opened last night in the big tent erected on the courthouse lawn with one of the largest crowds in the history of the local Chautauqua in attendance. The first attraction of the week's entertainment was the great American drama "Turn to the Right." The players in the cast were all artists and the audience enjoyed every moment. The program for this year's Chautauqua promises to be the best ever presented to the people of Dallas and Polk county, and while some little trouble has been experienced by the guarantors in disposing of their allotted tickets, it is believed that they will again sign up a contract with the Ellison-White people for a return of the Chautauqua next season. The big tent has been erected on the courthouse lawn in order to give every one an opportunity to attend without the least amount of trouble. Several times the Chautauqua was held in the city park but it was found that the distance to the grounds were such that the attendance was cut down. Tonight's program will be another one of exceptional merit in the shape of an address on "China and the Future Peace of the Pacific," by Dr. Ng Poon Chew, a celebrated Chinese lecturer.

MILL'S PAYROLL GROWING BIGGER

Rapid Growth Is Constant in Big Paper-Making Plant in Salem

There were 315 house employees drawing pay from the Oregon Pulp & Paper company, the Salem paper mill, Tuesday night; and there are 100 more men employed in the building contracts on the enlargement of the plant, who draw their money directly from the contractors but ultimately from the company. There are wood cutters out in the valley, too, the men who produce the 100 cords of wood every day that the mill consumes. Altogether this is one of the most important payrolls of the state, and growing bigger every month.

The plant is growing bigger constantly. The company thought it had a "complete" mill when it was built, three years ago. But they hadn't fired the first boiler when it was already too small, and they've been building steadily ever since. The improvements now under way will increase the wood consumption from 100 cords to 225 cords a day, and the payroll in almost exact growing proportion. The two huge new digesters, being built in Portland to double the present capacity, will be ready by the time the building is ready to house them in, and the whole plant is being increased at the same rate.

All the iron work possible is being built on the coast. These two giant digesters are typical of the company policy of buying at home. Some of the specialized machinery necessarily has come from eastern shops, but whatever can be built at home is to bear the Oregon label as a valued trade mark.

A curious thing is being shown in the development of help to run the plant. There are many important jobs in the plant that pay good money, and because of the steady work and the indoor sheltered conditions the jobs should prove especially desirable. But though the mill has been running now for almost three years, it is still found necessary to import mechanics and paper specialists from the eastern mills to fill the more important places. The company has wished to use home men as well as home materials, and every opportunity is given all the aspiring employes to advance on the payroll and in the business of paper making. There are a lot of good-jobs that will last as long as the forests continue to grow pulpwood on the Pacific coast, waiting for some earnest young Oregon men who really want to learn the paper business and accept some responsibility. The phenomenal growth of the company, and the certain great extensions yet to come, make the paper business a fine prospect for any steady young man.

Some new ventilators have been installed this week on the roof of the main building. During the summer time, the mill is "hit" with the steam rolls in operation, and these new ventilators will help to take away the superheated air.

Funeral Is Held for Child Recently Drowned

DALLAS, Or., June 19.—(Special to The Statesman.)—Burnice, the little 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Vilwock, who was drowned in a spring on the family farm in the Salt Creek community north of Dallas Saturday morning, was laid to rest Sunday in the Salt Creek cemetery. The funeral services were held in the German Baptist church at Salt Creek. Just how the child was drowned is a mystery, but it is supposed that she lost her balance while taking a drink at the spring and fell into the water, which was quite deep at that place. The body was found about an hour after the child had been missed from the house by the father.
