SALEM BEST HOG MARKET IN THIS COUNTRY

These four things have happened in the Salem district in the past four years that help materially in the prosperity of the city and the progressive growth of the surrounding country:

Hogs on our farms have increased in number until there are now three to four times as many being produced as were being produced then.

The country surrounding Salem has become a good corn country, and the acreage has grown enormously, and the quality has been improving from year to year.

Dairying in the Salem district has a great deal more than doubled—and the cow is the wet nurse of the hog.

Salem men have established and developed a packing plant; adopted a label and found a market, and extended the market until their plant is now up to capacity; and they have been all the time ahead of the local supply of hogs—

And they have paid and are now paying and will continue to pay prices that make Salem the best hog market in the whole country.

A well posted authority says the western market will likely average about a cent and a half higher than the eastern market, until our swine breeders produce enough hogs to fill the western demand. And that will likely be a long time in the future; though the farmers of the Salem district ought to do a great deal more than they are doing towards attaining this end; even though they have in four years made a showing of much progress.

No farm in this district, no matter how small, should be without hogs—and especially should there be hogs here wherever there are cows.

The highest profits in swine breeding here will be made in connection with dairying.

Here is the advice of an experienced breeder: "Every breeder has his likes and dislikes. The thing to do is to select the breed that will make pork and make it fast. And do not feed any that will not pay. Raise good hogs—hogs with good dispositions and good feeding qualities."

Here is the testimony of another successful Oregon breeder:

"I believe there is no pure bred game a man can go into with so little money and pay out so soon as with a pure bred sow. I further believe that if the average farmer would sell for pork his three, four or five ordinary sows and buy just one real good one, in a few years he would be able to BUY HIS NEIGHBOR'S FARM, (if his neighbor persisted in raising scrub hogs), from just one real sow."

There are several local hogs and the same movement ought to be boomed in Yamhill, Linn, Washington, Benton and Clackamas, in territory tributary to the Salem market.

This thing cannot be overdone; at least not in the present generation. Millions annually may be added to the wealth of the Salem district by a hog boom, for it will mean more cows, poultry, sheep and goats and beef cattle, and greater fertility of the soil for all crops, and vastly more money for the development of the country in thousands of ways. "More hogs, more cows, more corn, more money" is the adaptation of a slogan that might be sounded and lived up to with immense profit here in this district.

LOGANBERRIES ARE SENT TO CHICAGO MARKET

set much more than the picking and price of crates out of them on the first dozen cars, I am satisfied that the later cars will bring some real money; our opinion based on our raspberry deal in 1921; after we got them started we got the real money, whereas had we quit after shipping the first few cars we would have never developed a market for them.

"Try and load your cars as per our instructions, as we are surprised that these cars arrived in any condition, as they are loaded too heavy. This, you know, weakens your refrigeration, and that is why I am so optimistic about the final results; if these cars carried through, then there is no question about cars going through when loaded minimum weight.

"Mr. Aspinwall talked about some double deck raspberry crates some party had. Are these still available, and if so, why not get them? This alone would tend to bring more money, as we are having no difficulty of selling loganberries for nearly the same price we get for raspberries, which proves that the package has a lot to do with the price the trade will pay for them.

"Let us hear from you with reference to the above, and we will advise net results just as soon as we get the news from our representatives. We are, yours truly, "GWIN, WHITE & PRINCE, Inc. "P. H. KRUG."

THE BOYS AND GIRLS NEWSPAPER

The Biggest Little Paper in the World
Copyright, 1923, Associated Editors. Edited by John M. Miller.

Traveling in Many Lands

As you ride on the street car, on a train, or in an automobile do you ever think how boys and girls in other parts of the world travel from place to place? American boys and girls have the best and finest travel service in the world.

In Colombia, folks go up the steep Andes mountains carried on the back of an Indian native guide who has a little chair-like arrangement on his back.

Going to the other end of the globe, the Eskimos have to do much of their travel in dog sleds, when on solid ice. When they must take to open water, as they do in chasing seals and other food, they use a skin-covered canoe called a kayak.

In another of the cold spots of the world, Norway, most folks do their traveling either on skis or snowshoes.

If you take another several thousand mile jump and get into the Transvaal, a part of British Africa, you will find the people there going on long journeys in ox-drawn carts which have wheels of solid wood and looks a great deal like the prairie schooners which once crossed our western plains. Another type of wagon used in this district is one which has very large wheels and a short, squat body which makes the wagon look like a bull-frog sitting on a roller skate.

THE SHORT STORY, JR.

A FRIENDLY RATTLE

A "rattle" coiled up in the hall—a scream—then the sound of a fall.

The girls gathered 'round, all frightened, and found the joke was on them, after all.

The girls of the boarding school were all gathered in Florence Barton's room. As usual, every one was talking at once.

"Oh, girls, do be quiet a minute and listen to Flossy," burst out Betty Johnson. "She has something important to tell you."

"I just thought maybe we could have some fun," Florence began. "You know that new girl is scared to death of snakes. She comes from the North and has heard that we have lots of them down here. She asked me yesterday if they ever come in the house, and I told her we girls frequently found

The Praying Mantis is a Bloodthirsty Insect

There is nothing funny about being the husband of a female praying mantis. Mrs. Mantis, the queer little insect you see in the picture, has about the meanest disposition imaginable and takes it out on Mr. Mantis frequently. As soon as Mrs. Mantis becomes the least bit tired of her husband, which she will usually do after having known him for two or three days, she attacks him and eats him. As she is quite a bit larger than her husband and very much more ferocious, she has no more difficulty in disposing of him than she does in disposing of the crickets and other insects which form her usual fare.

Insect Boxers
Mrs. Mantis is a disagreeable lady not only to her husband, but also to the other females around her. Often two females will have a battle. Unless this occurs in the mating season they will stop their fight as soon as one of them has injured the other. As they attack each other they look very much like boxers, sparring with their powerful forelegs. If the fight takes place during the mating season, the battle is always to the death and the defeated mantis is eaten by her victorious rival. During the fights which Mrs. Mantis carries on she utters a war cry which sounds very much as though a child were trying to say, "Pouf, pouf."

Can Move Eyes
The mantis is the only insect in the entire insect family which can move its eyes in whatever direction it pleases. As it goes forth into battle, the mantis is a very terrifying creature. It rises on its hind legs, puts its blue-green wings to the side, and in back of the second pair of legs, stretches out its killer forelegs, and oggles its head on its double-jointed neck. (Next Week: A Bandit Bete.)

Proof Is Conclusive

The above letter gives conclusive proof that the fresh loganberries can be landed in Chicago and in other eastern cities in good condition.

It also shows that markets can be developed that will give a price that will make the growing of loganberries here remunerative. It costs $1.45 a crate with 18 pounds of loganberries to get the berries into Chicago. This includes all charges. This leaves $1.05 a crate for the grower here, or nearly 6 cents a pound.

Rain Against Them
How many more cars may be sent this year is a question. Four and a half cars have been sent. Had the rain not come they would have been going forward at the rate of two to four cars a day now. But the rain softened the berries, and the ripe berries hang on the vines and must be gotten rid of in some way, if there are to be any more berries picked in good condition for shipping. This is difficult for the growers who have not prepared in advance.

However, a way may be found to work out the problem, so that these people may resume shipments.

The big thing, however, is the demonstration of the outlet—and they will be ready next year to handle the situation. They will not plow up their vines.

They are signed up to contribute a tenth of a cent a pound to an advertising fund. The consuming public will be told about loganberries before they arrive.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre at Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—Adv.

They will arrive in neat crates. Everything will be worked out in advance.

And so the loganberry industry will be kept going and growing, in this and other ways.

There are big losses this year by loganberry growers, on account of a state of unpreparedness. They will not be caught in this way another year.

Oregon Growers Taking All

The Oregon Growers Cooperative association has 28 dryers going now on loganberries. They are a busy bunch, but they are taking them all. No loganberries are being dumped, excepting a few over-ripe ones in the yards of some of their members; a condition brought about by the rains. But all berries that are fit to dry or to be handled in any other way are being taken care of.

New Cartons Here

Samples of their new loganberry cartons have arrived. They are handsome. This association disposed of all the dried loganberries of their members last year. They propose to do the same this year. They have not hung out a sign to have the berries quit coming. But the whole force is busy, and all hands will be glad when the loganberry harvest is over for their members.

JUDGE RECEIVES NOTE FROM KLAN

Advises Him to Return to Ireland if America Does Not Suit Him

LAS VEGAS, N. M., July 11.—Judge David J. Leahy, presiding in the trial of Carl A. Magee, Albuquerque editor on charges of contempt, announced in court this afternoon that he had received a threatening letter today signed "K. K. K."

"Today," said Judge Leahy, "I received a threatening letter thru the mails. It was postmarked Las Vegas. This is what it said: 'You old Irish judge, if you better go back to Ireland if you don't like this country. You try to send men to jail for telling the truth. I will be in your presence, I am from Texas.'"

The letter was signed "K. K. K.," the judge announced.

When Judge Leahy had finished reading the letter he stepped from behind the judicial bench to the front of the platform. Addressing the well filled court room and pointing that he was not robed in court apparel, he dared the writer of the letter to make himself known, if in the room.

MY FRIEND THE DEVIL
WILLIAM LEARY FOR SPECIAL PRODUCTION

"I stand here before the dirty, cowardly reprobate that wrote that letter," Judge Leahy said.

The judge waited a moment and then said, as he resumed the bench: "He doesn't seem to be here."

The afternoon session of Magee's trial was marked by a direct statement from the bench by Judge Leahy that a woman witness for Magee had lied in her testimony and the ruling by Judge Leahy that Judge Richard H. Hanna, chief counsel for Magee, was guilty of direct contempt of court.

The widow of George Laemle, the latter alleged to have been killed four years ago by an automobile driven by M. M. Padgett, who now is postmaster of Las Vegas, was placed on the stand by the defense in an attempt to prove its charge of alleged failure to properly prosecute certain cases in this district. She testified that after her husband's death she had sought to cause Padgett to be prosecuted but that the district attorney declined to prosecute Padgett. Her testimony along that line was objected to by the state and the court sustained the objection.

UNCLE JOE'S START

"Uncle Joe" Cannon's first speech in the house had been written into history as "the hayseed speech," but it really resulted in revision of the postal code establishing the pound rate of paying postage on second-class mail matter.

The postage on newspapers previously had to be paid by the subscriber and collected by the postmaster making the delivery. Under the legislation put through by Cannon the postage had to be paid at the office of publication at a pound rate.

FELLOWSHIP AWARDED

EUGENE, Or., July 10.—Word was received here today by Dr. John J. Landsbury, dean of the school of music at the University of Oregon that an award was made by the Juilliard Musical Foundation of New York of a fellowship of $1,000 to $1,200 for a graduate and a scholarship of $750 for an undergraduate.

ALL COUNTIES USE STATE MONEY

Common School and Rural Credit Funds Mainly Used By Citizens

Exclusive of loans on which foreclosures are now being brought, the state land board has loaned in the several counties of the state a total of $6,781,515.84 from the common school fund, $435,484.34 from the rural credit fund, $160,451.50 from the college fund and $20,748 from the university fund.

Loans from the college and university funds are scant. In Benton county, home of the agricultural college, a total of $158,316.50 has been loaned from the college fund. $500 has been loaned in Tillamook county, and $3630 in Wheeler county. From the university fund $1000 has been loaned in Hood River county, $78,745 in Lane county, home of the university, and $1000 in Yamhill county.

Foreclosures now in progress cover $276,965 from the common school fund, $12,309.64 from the rural credits fund and $600 from this college fund.

In Marion county there is loaned from the common school fund $337,550, and from the rural credit fund $24,222.51. Polk county has $170,756.61 of the common school fund and $12,160.40 from the rural credit fund. 160.cred-r ehaeEdtd.

What Would You Do?

(No. 12)

Roberts wants to borrow $100 from you. You know he is a minor, but you also know that he is married and needs the money to pay for groceries and other necessities. The law states that contracts made by a minor for maintenance of his family are binding, so you let him have the money, taking his note for payment. Were you safe in doing this?

Auction Off Your Money

THINK of your money as something for sale to the highest bidder. That's what it actually is.

And bidders are legion. Look through the advertisements and you will find them—every one. They shout, beckon or nod to you through the medium of type and picture. Each seeks to outdo the others in the attractiveness of his offer. Each vies with the others for the privilege of your attention.

Competition is keen, if you only realized it. Each advertisement in this paper is an offer made directly to you. Each is worthy of your interest in some degree.

Read the advertisements. Know what this manufacturer or that merchant offers in return for your cash. Hear all the bids. Compare values. Check up on the offerings. Then you can be sure you are getting the most for your money.
