PACTS URGED TO PROCLAIM WAR ILLEGAL

Woman Judge of Ohio Supreme Court Makes Eloquent Plea to Business and Professional Clubs

PORTLAND MAKES BID FOR NEW PRESIDENT

Miss Prichard Nominated; Election Will Be Held This Afternoon

PORTLAND, Or., July 12.—

(By the Associated Press.)—War should be made illegal by agreement among the civilized nations, and a start in that direction should be made by treaty between the United States and England, or the United States and South America, providing that henceforth as between those nations as outlined, said Judge Florence E. Allen of the supreme court of Ohio, in an address tonight at the annual banquet of the national Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs, which is holding its fifth convention here.

Many For—None Against

"We have certain laws about war, but none against war," she said. "There are laws as to how war should be made, but they do not forbid war. Even as the ancient code declared 'thou shalt not kill' so surely must the modern code declare 'thou shalt not war.'"

Judge Allen's topic was "The supreme challenge," and this, she said, was an appeal to women to exert their influence for the maintenance of ethical standards in national affairs and in business.

Characterizing the progress that women have made in the past century, as a "miracle," she said: "Women have come into their own at a time when the world is torn with strife and the spirit of civilization seems dead."

Intelligence Challenged

"Upon this stage of the world desolated by war and embittered by hatred and suspicion steps the woman with her new-found power. The challenge to us is that we shall use our intelligence, our training, our organizations with exactly the same faith and idealism that women have always displayed."

"We have to believe that the world can be different. We have to believe that the bungling processes of society can be refined. We have to believe that right can be done through government. We have to believe that mankind which has mastered nature so that now we climb through the air in airplanes and dive under the sea in boats can master itself in groups so that the standard shall be not 'the state can do no wrong' but that 'the state shall do no wrong.'"

Keep Ethical Standards

"We must have faith and ideals even in business. We have to establish a standard that the purpose of business is not the amassing of money but the doing of work worth while, the delivery of an honest product, and that the finest thing about work is the love of the working. We have to demand that the law of the jungle shall not obtain in business."

"This means that we are to maintain ethical standards and the world is crying for ethical standards to be maintained. After all, did you ever happen to think that the question of peace and war is an ethical question, and that the barrier between peace and war is an ethical barrier, for there is no law against war."

Mrs. Carrie Jacobs Bond of Hollywood, Cal., composer, spoke on "A new field," and Miss Charl Williams of Washington, D. C., on "Opportunities and responsibilities of business women in education today."

GAME BOARD IS MADE DEFENDANT

Winslow to Test Whether Commission Has Right to Shift Deer Season

Members of the state game commission were made the defendants in a complaint filed yesterday by W. S. Winslow, who declares that this body has exceeded its authority in arbitrarily seeking to change the open season on hunting deer from August 20 to September 10. The action was brought when Mr. Winslow learned from John H. Carson, district attorney for Marion county, that he would be prosecuted if he hunted deer before the date specified by the game commission.

The hunting season, as fixed by law, permits the killing of deer between August 20 and October 31. The proposed date would shorten this by nearly three weeks.

In his complaint Mr. Winslow declares that he makes hunting trips for the purpose of sport and to obtain a supply of meat, which constitutes one of the material sources of food supply for the plaintiff. He further declares that a majority of people take their annual vacations late in August, and if the date were retarded, these would be unable to take advantage of the vacation and hunt deer. It is also alleged that he has entered into a contract with a packer for this coming season, and can be held to breach of contract if he is unable to hunt before September 10.

A temporary restraining order against the defendants, their wardens and deputies preventing the prosecution of the plaintiff if any other person who hunts before the date set by the commission is asked. In addition, upon final determination of the issues involved, it is asked that the commission be permanently enjoined from putting the order into effect.

Shipping Board Boats Lose Out; Stop in Porto Rico Planned on Way Back to New York City

PRESIDENT ARRIVES IN SEWARD AT NOON

Trail Trip Still Undecided Upon; "Harding Weather" Is Welcomed

ABOARD U. S. S. HENDERSON WITH PRESIDENT HARDING,

July 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—President Harding will make the trip from San Diego to New York via the Panama canal and Porto Rico on the army transport Henderson, instead of on the shipping board steamship President Harding or American Legion.

Definite arrangements for the use of the Henderson were concluded today and announcement was made that the schedule for the return trip provided for the arrival of the presidential party at New York August 27. It was considered likely that the president would deliver an address there before proceeding to Washington.

GULF PROVES SMOOTH

ABOARD U. S. S. HENDERSON WITH PRESIDENT HARDING, July 12.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Henderson today continued on her course across the Gulf of Alaska en route to Seward where she was due to arrive shortly after noon tomorrow. After a short stay there the party will go aboard a special train and start over the Alaska railroad for Anchorage and Fairbanks.

The chief executive was still undecided today whether to make the three-day trip from Fairbanks over the Richardson trail and then down the Copper River & Northwestern railroad to Cordova or to return over the Alaska railroad to Seward and then take the Henderson to Cordova.

Rough water expected in the Gulf of Alaska did not put in its appearance and the entire day's sailing was over a comparatively smooth sea.

WILLAMETTE OUT-RAINED KETCHIKAN, Alaska, July 8.

(By A. P. Mail Service.)—Everybody in Ketchikan believes there is something to the stories about "Harding weather." It was a bright clear day when President Harding arrived here on his Alaskan tour and such days are few and far between in the territory's southernmost port where no less an authority than Admiral Rodman asserts that "it rains 360 days every year and drizzles the other five." This portion of the coast really has about 13 feet of rain annually.

From the time it was definitely announced at Washington that the president was planning to visit Alaska, the people of Ketchikan began hoping and almost praying that the sun would shine on Mr. Harding when he stepped ashore. And sure enough it did, and members of the presidential party and some of the people here ascribe it to "Harding weather."

Real "Harding Weather." The phrase "Harding weather" grew out of the 1920 campaign, during which not a drop of rain fell in Marion on any of the days that Mr. Harding received visiting delegations on his "front porch." Also it never rained during any of his campaign trips. The phrase gained further basis during the recent transcontinental trip which was marked by fair weather except for the day in Tacoma, and even then there was only a light drizzle which did not operate to interfere with the chief executive's program.

The "land lubber" members of the party, as is always the case, were all confused until they learned the difference between port and starboard, and the meaning of such terms as "fore," "aft," "stern" and "bow." Naval officers and the more sea-wise members of the party had a good laugh on hearing one of the secret service men say that his quarters were "on the right hand side of the boat near the tail end."

RUHR PROBLEM NOT OUTLINED FOR POPULACE

Baldwin and Curzon Do Not State How Far England Will Go in Disapproval of French Policy

PRONOUNCEMENT IS PHRASED CAREFULLY

Opportunity for Further Negotiations Is Not Closed By Address

LONDON, July 12.—(By The Associated Press.)—The prime minister, Stanley Baldwin, in the house of commons, and Marquis Curzon, in the house of lords, made identical pronouncement to eager audiences today on the government's policy on the reparations problem. In contrast to such statements by his predecessors Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Bonar Law, which were very long, Premier Baldwin's pronouncements were particularly brief, taking about 16 minutes for delivery and as in neither house did the opposition offer criticism of any consequence, the momentous occasions were quickly ended.

Question Not Answered

The question which was on everybody's lips—how far the British government's open disapproval of the French Ruhr policy and its holding aloof therefrom were to be converted into an active policy separate from France, was to a great extent unanswered. Premier Baldwin certainly moved quite perceptibly away from Bonar Law's attitude of passivism, inasmuch as he announced the government's decision to submit to the allies a separate reply to Germany's latest offer.

But he did not give the slightest indication of the nature of the proposed reply.

Warning is Friendly

This was the only important point on the pronouncement which, for the remainder, was a warning couched in the most friendly language, but plainly telling France that the British government could not much longer.

WIFE JAILED FOR SLAYING HER HUSBAND

Woman Suspected of Crime Committed in Los Angeles More Than Year Ago

LOS ANGELES, July 12.—Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich, whose wealthy husband Frederick Oesterreich formerly a clothesman manufacturer of Milwaukee, Wis., was shot to death in their residence in a fashionable district of Los Angeles more than a year ago, was later in the city jail late today on suspicion of his murder, according to Captain of Detectives George Home.

The arrest came after the police had received information that Mrs. Oesterreich had disposed of two automatic pistols of the same caliber with which her husband had been questioned for five hours, during which she was said to have screamed denials of police accusations until her voice became hoarse.

The transfer of the weapons was alleged to have taken place within four days after Oesterreich was slain.

Mrs. Oesterreich told the police she knew nothing of the slaying of her husband and had been locked in a closet in her home while the shots which killed him were fired. She denied that she disposed of any weapons.

These figures were based on estimated total receipts of $400,000. Willard received 30 percent and Firpo 22 percent of the gross amount.

Official check, however, Tex Rickard said, will not be completed until tomorrow. His estimate of an attendance of more than 100,000, he said, was inclusive of all within the bowls, police, ushers, and others who did not figure in the box office total.

BINGHAM RULES FOR 1 MEASURE

Supreme Court to Determine Whether Duplicate Tax Bill Goes on Ballot

In event the supreme court does not reverse the decision of Judge G. G. Bingham of the Marion county circuit court only one referendum measure directed at the state income tax law enacted at the last session of the legislature will go on the ballot at the special election to be held in Oregon November 6.

Suit to enjoin the secretary of state from placing on the ballot the referendum measure sponsored by the State Income Tax Referendum league was filed in the circuit court here yesterday by the Oregon Just Tax league, of which R. W. Hagood of Portland is president.

W. Lair Thompson, attorney for Mr. Hagood, in his argument before the court, alleged that the referendum petitions filed by the State Income Tax Referendum league were identical with the exception of the signatures, and it would not be good policy to allow both of them to appear on the ballot. Such action, he said, would confuse the voters and might prevent a fair expression of the electorate on the issue.

It was alleged by Mr. Thompson that the referendum petitions sponsored by the Oregon Just Tax league were filed with the secretary of state early in March, while the petitions of the State Income Tax Referendum league were not filed until several weeks later. The filing of the first petitions complied with all the requirements of the referendum statutes, Mr. Thompson argued, and the secretary of state erred in accepting officially the petitions submitted by the State Income Tax Referendum league.

It was the contention of Mr. Thompson that the petitions filed by the Oregon Just Tax league should go on the ballot, while the petitions filed by the State Income Tax league should not be considered more seriously than material necessary for a reserve measure. The State Income Tax league was not represented at the hearing.

Notice of appeal to the supreme court was announced by Willis Moore, assistant attorney general, immediately following receipt of Judge Bingham's decision. The formal notice of appeal was prepared late yesterday and the supreme court will be asked to advance the case on the docket.

In commenting upon his decision Judge Bingham declared that inasmuch as the two titles were identical, and were only sponsored by different parties, leaving them both on the ballot was equivalent to permitting two votes. The jurisdiction will give an opportunity to remedy the situation.

GOVERNORS WILL TOUR TWO STATES

Richardson, Pierce and Hart, With Highway Officials, to View Roads

Governor Richardson of California and the California state highway commission will arrive in Grants Pass, Or., at 8:15 o'clock a. m. July 23, and in the next few days following will make an automobile tour of the highways of Oregon and Washington. This was announced at the office of Governor Pierce yesterday. They will be met at Grants Pass by Governor Pierce of Oregon, the state highway commission and Roy A. Klein, Oregon state highway engineer, and in the evening of July 23 will be met at Salem by Governor Hart of Washington and party. The Oregon party will accompany the California and Washington parties through the state of Washington.

Record Attendance of 100,000 Witness Former Title-Holder Retired Before Onslaught of Younger Man From Argentine; Superior Weight, Height, Reach and Experience Fall During Attack; Loser Game.

JERSEY CITY, July 12.—Jess Willard, the man-mountain from Kansas, went back to fistic oblivion tonight but he staged the last, though futile act of his come-back before a vast throng of more than 100,000, the greatest in ring history, that filled Boyle's Thirty Acres to overflowing.

Louis Angel Firpo, the dark-browed mauler from the Argentine closed the door to Willard's attempted return to fistic fame by knocking out the giant former champion in the eighth round of a clashing battle—one of the greatest in recent heavyweight history. Incidentally he reached the goal at which he has aimed for the past year of his meteoric rise to prominence—a match for the title with Jack Dempsey.

There was no question of the superiority of the brilliant Argentine battler tonight. Willard's superior weight, height and reach enabled the big Kansan to check Firpo's rushing attacks in most of the early rounds but despite the American's gameness under fire the tide of battle swung inevitably in favor of the younger, more rugged fighter.

SUBLIMITY WOMAN IS UNDER CHARGE

Mrs. Al Friedel Accused By Government of Defrauding Mail Order House

PORTLAND, Or., July 12.—By the simple insertion of a "0" after a "7" and the letters "ly" after the word "seven" in a check that she had used to pay a bill with a Chicago mail order house, Mrs. Al Friedel, of Sublimity, Oregon, was able to convert $7.73 into $70.73 and then collect the difference of $63 from the mail order house, together with a gracious letter of apology for having made an error in the matter, federal officials charge.

This transaction and others which are contained in the record of the Friedel case in Assistant Federal Prosecutor Bynon's office, tell a story of a highly successful campaign upon leading mail order houses, which Mrs. Friedel is charged with having conducted and because of which she is under arrest. She will plead to arraignment some time this afternoon.

After her arrest it was found that there was nobody except the husband to take care of her small brood of children at Sublimity, and the woman was released on her own recognizance.

Records from the bank through which the $7.73 check passed clinched the proof of the alteration in that case. One of the other methods that Mrs. Friedel is charged with having employed successfully on various mail order houses, was, after dealing with them in a small way for a time, to write a letter saying that she had sent back some unsatisfactory goods for which she desired a refund. The goods never arrived, but in most cases the mail order house apologized for having mixed up the order and made the refund anyhow.

"If she hadn't worked the game too many times on the same house, she might be going still," says Bynon.

HOSPITAL CONCERT GREATLY ENJOYED

Large Crowd Attends Reception Last Night; Drive Starts Monday

A good crowd attended the band concert and reception at the Salem hospital last night. The band was stationed in front of the entrance. Miss Lena Belle Tartar sang two solos as part of the evening program.

Salem Cherrians in trim white suits acted as a reception committee and escorted visitors through the new buildings.

The new building was lighted up for the occasion and signs in the different rooms indicated the special forte of that particular part of the building.

The campaign for funds with which to complete the building will start Monday. The building is plastered now and it is ready for the finishing carpenters.

Letters From a Salem Fight Fan

By GEORGE H. GRAVES
ROUND XII

MIKE'S PLACE, Glacier National Park, Mont., July 8.—Well, at last I met an Oregon car, and much to my surprise, do you think was in it? Mrs. Regner of Portland, sister-in-law of Hal Patton.

At Great Falls, I ran up against a new one on me. I drove up to a filling station. There are no Standard Oil filling stations in this state, and I might say anything else excepting bad roads and rain. And, by the way, there is not any dust. It does not stop raining long enough to have dust.

Well, the man at the filling station said: "Do you want high test gasoline, or low test?"

I never had that sprung on me before. I did not know what to say. Naturally I asked him the difference and he said: "Three cents a gallon."

I said: "Give me the low test. But I soon found out there was more than 3 cents a gallon difference. I was going over that terrible road between Great Falls and Glacier Park hotel. The engine would miss and when I would come to a hill I could hardly get up on tow. I was ashamed of my car as all the other cars would pass me on the hills. If this filling station man had said: "Do you want gasoline or coal oil?" I would have known what to say.

I have been ill for three days. Lost my appetite, nervous, could not sleep and when I did, awoke wet with perspiration. Felt so sick I could hardly navigate. Have just discovered it is all due to the high altitude.

Well Hal, here is the information you ask for: Gasoline in Glacier National park costs 60 cents a gallon and you can get good hotel accommodations for $6 a day. I expected to pay $5.

that I am travelling alone. People cannot understand it, so I have to explain why to almost everyone I meet. It's getting so it vexes me everytime they mention it. Of course if I had some one with me I would have more fun, and my letters would be more interesting. I did not mind it when I was on good roads but travelling alone on these awful roads; it makes them 10 times worse.

Oregon certainly has made a reputation on her good roads. Especially with the tourists from the eastern states.

A car pulled up here yesterday that had travelled all over the United States and Canada. I noticed a 1923 Oregon permit on the windshield. They did not know I was from Oregon, I said to them. "In what state have you found the best roads?" They all threw up their hands and all yelled together, "Oregon." That is the universal opinion.

The first night here I met a young man from North Dakota. He seemed to take a liking to me. I seemed to amuse him for I always let a smile on his face. off sat around the large fire place and I amused the whole crowd by telling them of my letters to the Statesman. After that we went to the dance in the hotel cafe, that was rather tame and we mentioned to the waitress.

She said: "Why don't you go over to Mike's Place?"

"Where is Mike's Place?"

"Across the track."

It was 11 o'clock but we wandered out of the hotel, through the dark, across the track and there we found Mike's Place. The name alone was enough to make it interesting to me. Outside were a string of Fords and the horses of the cowboys tied to a hitching rack. We entered the shack, go-
