TRESTLE COLLAPSES AT SIDNEY, OHIO.

Photo of trestle which collapsed at Sidney, Ohio. It was being used in the work of elevating the Big Four railroad tracks through the city and was built to a height of eighty-five feet, from which the dump trains scattered their load, and it was while one of these trains was in the center of the trestle that the structure collapsed, killing one workman and injuring several others. The work of cutting down several large hills and making the immense fill that is necessary through the valley is considered one of the greatest railroad engineering feats of its kind in the country and is costing more than $4,000,000.

PROWLER SCARES SLEEPY GIRLS

Police Matron and Night Officer Called—Big Cat Is Arrested

Did you ever, while you lay and courted sleep on a rare and sultry night, hear the soft and stealthy "pat, pat, pat" of footsteps just outside your chamber door? Did you ever rise and vainly peer, without getting within range, seeking to see who this stealthy prowler might be? While a score of Salem maids, busy lassies, every one all the live long day, while they slept or sought to slip away into the land of nod, each heard on Thursday night a guarded, stealthy step on the hot black roof just outside their chamber windows. First one and then another garbed herself in robe and mules and slipping on dainty bits of lacy caps, sought the counsel of each other in the hallway just outside their chamber doors. Remember, these were business girls accustomed to doing things without hurry or panic. Said one, "This is the business of the police; let us call Mrs. Coe." Forthwith they calmly put in a call for the police station, and Officers Coe and Smart responded as good police matrons and policemen always do. Now, being business girls, and never missing anything of importance which pertains to the matter in hand, they had discovered, by careful listening, that the prowler had sought the safe regions of the roof above their heads in preference to that outside their windows. Officer Smart having been instructed minutely as to the probable location of the one sought, and with his faithful "billy" clasped tightly in his hand, bravely mounted the back stairs which leads to the roof. All was silent, while Officer Coe waited below to give aid when the villain should be brought down. Finally she heard a loud thump and a thud. Then again all was silence. After a seemingly indefinite time, Officer Smart marched down the stairs preceded by a large, black tom-cat which weighed ten pounds, according to Mrs. Coe. These efficient business maids, having disposed of the matter in hand, turned their attention to that which was of next importance—a night's sleep. The clock struck 12 o'clock.—Friday, the 13th. And quiet reigned in the YWCA on a still hot night in July. Mrs. Coe did not state how she weighed the cat on such short notice.

THE FLAX PULLING MACHINE AT WORK

It Will Be at the Thomason Place All Day Today, on Some Riper Flax

The flax pulling machine was put to work on the farm of its inventor, Jos. Bartosz, a mile east and south of Turner, on the Marion road, yesterday, the manufacturer, Mr. Tenney, being present; also a lot of people interested in the industry, including officials of the penitentiary.

It was found that the machine did not work as well as expected, and the men in charge said this was because of the fact that the flax on the Bartosz place was too green.

So the machine will be moved, and it will be worked all day today on the P. E. Thomason place, nearby, where there are some fields of flax that are riper, and ready to pull. In fact, Mr. Thomason has already commenced pulling this flax, by hand. So has another grower in that neighborhood, who has early sown flax.

Of course, this tryout of the machine is attracting wide attention among the flax growers. They know that if the machine will not do the work, they will be under the necessity of getting enough help to pull their flax by hand. This would take a lot of help, and there would be a great scurrying for hands.

A Canadian Machine—There is no doubt but the principle in the Bartosz machine is right. If it does not prove entirely successful this year, it will no doubt be brought to perfection for next year's crop.

There is also a Canadian machine that is said to be successful, and the manufacturer is trying to get an order from the penitentiary authorities to send some of these machines over.

Entire City Block Razed By Fire in Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—One entire city block and several homes in adjoining blocks were destroyed early tonight when two small boys were unable to control a bonfire set by them in the rear of the studio of the Edwin H. Flagg Scenic company, at 16th street and Long Beach avenue. Four industrial plants, at least, four residences and probably a dozen sheds and garages were destroyed. The loss was said to be several hundred thousand dollars.
