Objects to Cost of Bill—
Silverton has filed its objection to the cost bill turned in by J. W. Parker. According to the objection raised, reporter's fees of $7.50 should not be taken into account, as it had been agreed that each would pay one-half the cost, and that it is not a taxable item. The premium on surety bonds, listed at $20, to cover the issuance of the temporary injunction, should not exceed $10, it is alleged, as only one undertaking was required and this premium did not exceed this amount.

Mules Follow Him—
Merwin Stolzeise, the sensational Willamette freshman athlete who has starred in so many athletic lines during the past year, is spending the summer on a grain farm at Pomeroy, Wash., getting ready for the coming university season financially and physically. He writes that he is driving a team of six on a binder, and they have four little mule colts following them—they're that kind of horses. He is learning the mule-kick and the binder strong-arm and the general farm brawn that will come in handy for the Willamette football schedule this fall. Stolzeise is one of the most versatile, and one of the most willing and efficient, athletes in the history of Willamette.

Mae Bradley Gets Divorce—
Swearing off one may be had enough, but when threats are made to kill a woman, to say nothing of having to dodge an occasional hammer, it is time to quit. These were some of the things set forth in the complaint filed by Mae F. Bradley against Robert S. Bradley that resulted in a divorce decree being signed Saturday by Judge Bingham. In addition to these things, she alleges her husband forced her to perform hard manual labor in the fields and outbuildings without providing her with sufficient clothing. No attempt is made to collect alimony, as the plaintiff declares Bradley is about 68 years of age and without means of support other than manual labor. Her former name, of Mae F. Waller, was restored. The couple were married in Linn, Wash., on January 9, 1917.

Railroad Files Suit—
In an effort to collect freight charges on shipments from Medford, Or., to Havana, Cuba, in 1920, the Southern Pacific filed two suits in the county clerk's office yesterday against the Oregon Growers Cooperative association and the United States Fidelity & Guaranty company. Both shipments were for pears, the complaint states, and involve about $7000, including war tax. The railroad company contends that Alvarino & Alfonso, consignees, are insolvent, and that the Oregon Growers and the bond-

Races Deferred—
Salem people who had expected to take in the auto races at Eugene today are advised that a message was received from Geo. W. Lott, who is interested in the race meet, that the Eugene city attorney had interfered with the Sunday racing program, and that the whole meet had been necessarily postponed for one day. The program, according to Mr. Lott, was to go forward on Monday, as it had been planned for the earlier day. Some of the Portland race cars drove through Salem Saturday on their way to the big meet. The races are run on a half-mile track, but one that is so well

The Personal Element in Banking
With us, here at the United States National, the personal element is a strong factor in the daily routine. The bank which is nothing more than a mere depository has overlooked its greatest privilege of service—that of being counsellor and friend to its patrons. Whether it be investments, loans or any other financial problem that you must solve, you have here a financial headquarters where you will find able, experienced men with whom to discuss it.
Make use of our advisory service. It is but one of the ways in which we are serving our many patrons constructively and well.
