

STORY OF CHERRIAN TRIP IS TOLD BY ONE OF THEM

Arrived home Wednesday noon July 25 from the Montana trip and was off again the following morning on a trip to southern Oregon with the Cherrians.

As we lined up at 7 in the morning there were 18 cars all tagged with a Cherrian sign. We had the band, and in all there were 50 Cherrians in uniform; just a nice number to make a good showing.

We rolled out of town all blowing our horns, and in a short time we were passing through the main street of Jefferson, with all the people on the main street waving us as we passed through.

Another half hour we were at Albany. Here we gave a street parade, and I carried the banner. One kind-hearted grocer, Billie Eastburn, gave us a box of peaches as we stopped in front of his place and snags a few songs.

We were off again over that rough road to Corvallis. I was ordered to take the lead and follow the traffic officer, and I set the pace and sure received a good shaking up in doing so.

About 20 miles out of Corvallis I stopped to put up the top, and of course all the other cars passed me, and when I was rolling again I soon caught up to a Cherrian car, parked on the side of the road.

At Eugene we fed ourselves at the restaurants, and then gave a street parade and were off to Cottage Grove for another parade. Cottage Grove did not know we were coming until 30 minutes before our arrival, but they certainly gave us an enthusiastic reception.

We did not make another stop until our arrival at Roseburg at 6 o'clock. Here we registered for the night, cleaned up, and were entertained at dinner by the Roseburg Chamber of Commerce.

The next morning all cars were off at 8, even Frank Waters, who had had his car repaired, and caught up with us at Roseburg. I was the only one left behind.

It happened that local talent was giving an open air concert at the fair grounds. We all went, our band played a few pieces, and then the wonderful show commenced. It was wonderful; I must confess it was one of the best I have ever seen.

Then to Medford where we dined ourselves, and after dinner, led by "The Craters," another parade. It happened that local talent was giving an open air concert at the fair grounds.

balance did not know anything about it. I would like to name these eight lucky Cherrians, but as I believe every one of them was married I fear I had better not mention any names.

This was a beautiful dance pavilion, good floor and good music, but the best of it all was that the ladies, and especially the leading ones, who took part in the opera, came over to the pavilion dressed in their costumes and monopolized the lucky eight.

Left Medford Saturday morning at 9 o'clock and were met at the city limits of Ashland by the "Lithians." There is where the real entertainment commenced. Their cars had banners reading "The Lithians welcome the Cherrians." They paraded us through the beautiful city of Ashland, and then to their wonderful park.

At noon came the wonderful well I was going to say luncheon, then dinner, but it was better than that. It was a banquet provided by the Lithians.

With characteristic caution Lillian glanced at Dr. Pettit for advice as to the answer he wished given to the child.

"I'm sure you will, Marion," he said calmly. "But I want you to keep very still for a little while and rest. Will you?"

"Oh, yes!" docilely, and her eyes went contentedly back to her mother's face.

"Everything's all right so far," His voice no less than his words reassured, for he had let the relief he felt show through his professional calm.

"I can't wait to have you guess," she said, "I'm hungry." "That's splendid," Dr. Pettit returned heartily.

"I came pretty near dying didn't I?" "Yes, sweetheart, but don't talk about it."

As Marion's weak little voice uttered her mother's name, Lillian bent over her with the tender, special understanding smile which loving mothers reserve for their children. It seemed itself to envelop the child in safety.

For this period of the fire season, the forest fire situation in Oregon is especially favorable, according to F. A. Elliott, state forester.

At her action I had seen Dr. Pettit's hand gesture toward her with involuntary though impotent protest, and realized that he feared movement for the little body with its as yet undetermined injuries.

"Only just this little bit." There was curious obstinacy in the child's respectful tone.

PRINGLE

The Clark children are still having a round with the whooping cough.

Mr. Bailord had 14 tons of fine hay baled last week.

A number of the Pringle folk are out on the coast this week.

Harvesting and haying are nearly finished. Wheat is fairly good, but the producer will realize very little for his labor at the prices.

Ernest Clark has moved his dwelling house to a location more desirable.

H. E. Stewart has been inspecting his pruned trees for borers.

A very exclusive junior secret society is being organized in the Pringle district.

The Sanders family have a new house building in Portland and intend to move there before long.

Some fruit farmers are topping strawberry vines; others cutting out the loganberry vines. Peas, beans and cabbage are fine this season.

GRAVE CHARGE MADE AGAINST LEWIS DORAN

"What are you running for?" the chief demanded.

"I don't know. I haven't done anything," replied Doran.

Prisoner Searched Doran was searched and taken to the police station by Chief Birtchet and Officer Thompson.

On his person was found a knife, with a red and white handle. The police were furnished a description of this before the arrest, and placed no credit in Doran's declaration that he had purchased the knife the day before, as it showed signs of having been submitted to a recent grinding.

For the past six months Doran has been working at the paper mill. Doran had been working on a shift that quit at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and after attacking the boys, would make his way home about 6 o'clock. His family stated that until his return to Salem about half a year ago they had no knowledge of his whereabouts for a period of three years.

Police are inclined to the theory that he was "doing time" somewhere, as he seemed to know a great deal concerning the penalty attached to the crime, particularly in the state of Kansas.

May Plead Guilty After a short talk with the police Doran indicated that he would plead guilty when arraigned before Police Judge Marten Poulsen during the day, probably this morning.

For conviction of the crime of sodomy Oregon laws demand a sentence in the state prison of from one to 10 years.
