SALEM SURPRISED AT HARDING DEATH

Statesman Extra Sells Rapidly on Streets—Phones Are Kept Busy

The announcement last night, over the Associated Press, that President Harding was dead, caught The Statesman as little prepared for the news as an office could well be. The force was scattered practically all over the Willamette valley. The pressmen and the newsboys and the circulating force were everywhere but at the office, and not dreaming of service until the next morning. Enough of them were located, however, to get out a real extra edition, a better one than most of the "wuxtrys" that come out under rush conditions from even the big city dailies. Within a short time a complete story of the president's death had been set up, printed, and the papers were being circulated all over the city. Some were rushed to outside towns. It was the fastest and the most successful "extra" ever put out in Salem.

Through radio, and grapevine, and the shouting of the "extra" sellers, the news spread electrically over the city that something unusual had happened. No accurate count was kept, but hundreds of people called up to inquire the news. Some inquiries came in from outside towns.

In some unexplained way a rumor of the president's death was circulated in New York and also in Salem two days ago. A number of inquiries to The Statesman that night asking for the real story. But last night the story was true—only nobody was ready for it.

Some of the boys made a real harvest through the sale of extras. Some bought a few papers on credit, rushed out and sold them, and then had money to buy a larger consignment. Practically every paper was sold.

DIVORCE DENIED MINNIE MASSEY

Judge Bingham Finds That Fault of Parties are About Equal

Minnie G. Massey was denied a divorce from Virgil H. Massey, Woodburn attorney, by a decree signed yesterday afternoon by Judge George G. Bingham, who stated that "the faults of the parties are about equally balanced."

Findings of facts and conclusions in the case by Judge Bingham were that the plaintiff had charged the defendant with numerous acts characterized as cruel and inhuman treatment, centering around the defendant's alleged conduct with Mrs. Lulu L. Lilly. Judge Bingham, after hearing the evidence, found that these accusations, so far as they related to misconduct, were denied by Massey. That the families of both Massey and Horace Lilly were friendly for two years prior to the first of 1922, was also included in the statement.

Both the Lillys and the Masseys lived at Stayton and visited back and forth frequently. However, according to the judicial opinion, about June 1921 Mrs. Massey commenced to criticize Mr. Massey on account of his attentions to Mrs. Lilly, and that the defendant, not being of a too amiable disposition, frequently quarreled, culminating with the salt shaker incident on May 19 of this year. There were no improprieties, it is stated, but on account of the plaintiff's protests it was not wise for the defendant to seek Mrs. Lilly's society, even with the knowledge and consent of Mr. Lilly. If the defendant wished to maintain harmony in the family.

For some time prior to May 19, continues the decision, the defendant was afflicted with rheumatism to such an extent that he found it necessary to go to a hospital. While suffering with this affliction he was irritable, and the plaintiff's suspicions and accusations easily started a quarrel. "The court finds that the couple had been married about 19 years and have three children, ranging in age from 6 to 18; that they had been industrious and frugal and have raised their children well and given them proper educational advantages," the conclusion stated. "They started life without any property and up to seats at regular prices, which he distributed among his friends. His only request to the management was that he be given a dressing room, so that he could let his hands soak in very hot water for half an hour before the concert. He explained that he had found this the best way to make them supple.

Workers in Steel Mills To Have Own Golf Course

PITTSBURG, Aug. 1.—A modern golf course for workmen in the mills at Ambridge, where structural steel is manufactured in great quantities, is the latest development of the game in the Pittsburgh district.

The plan is fathered by W. C. Fownes, Jr., the veteran golfer, who is financially interested in one of the mills, and construction of the course has been placed in the hands of Emil Loeffler, professional at the Oakmount Country club.

Ground on the hills bordering the mill village and near enough to be reached by a few minutes' walk, has been purchased, and the work will be started in a short time.

Present plans are not to make the course free to workmen who may want to play, but to keep the cost so low as to make it available for any of them. It is designed for men and women of the mill community who do not go in for other sports, and will provide them with recreation at a cost which hitherto has been looked upon as beyond their means.

Harding's Death Saddens People at Band Concert

Last night the Salem band was giving its gift concert to the people of West Salem, and had played through the delightful program all but the last two numbers when the word was received of the death of President Harding.

Director Oscar Steelhammer announced the bare, cold fact, very briefly—and then the band took up "The Star Spangled Banner," which brought the audience to its feet like a human wave. The fact was announced within a few minutes of the president's death and the audience carried home the memory of the song as a fitting tribute to a great and good president, and a great and good man.

Paderewski Buys Tickets For His Own Performance

PARIS, Aug. 1.—Ignace Jan Paderewski, the famous Polish pianist and composer, received one of the heartiest welcomes accorded him since his return to the concert stage when he appeared before a Paris audience recently. Thousands of people thronged to see him pass on his way to the theatre, and he was again besieged when the concert, a benefit affair, was concluded.

The French press re-told at great length the story of how the noted artist was expelled from Russia years ago by Emperor Alexander III, after Paderewski had played before the court.

"You are a great artist, and an honor to Russia," the emperor is reported to have said. "Pardon, Your Majesty," replied Paderewski. "To Poland."

The next day the pianist received an order to leave Russia, and he had never returned since.

The newspapers here also mentioned the fact that on the day of his first concert, Paderewski drove to the theatre box office and purchased nearly a hundred

It seemed to the members of the office force that about 18,000 people called up to inquire about the president's death. The broadcasting stations had announced the news, and the radio fans sounded like more than 18,000.
