

NEW THEORY OUTLINED

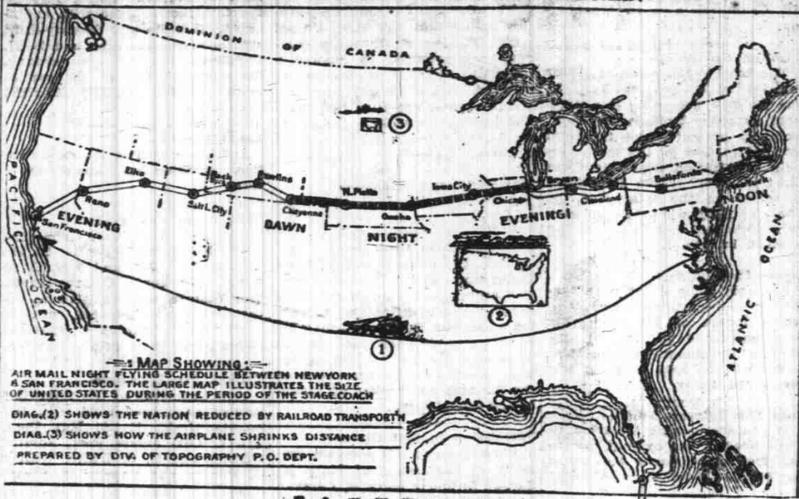

Magazine Editor Lectures On Electrons—Mr. Markey Describes Methods Used By Physicians In San Francisco.

(From the Oregonian of Yesterday).

Intense interest was manifested in the lecture of Alexander Markey, editor of the New Pearson's Magazine, who spoke at the Hellig theater last night on the Hellig methods of Dr. Albert Abrams of San Francisco, whose theory of electrons has caused as much interest as...

miniature reproduction whose action is similar to the system of the universe, he said. "There is a positive nucleus, like the sun which evolves negative electrons which move about it at a terrific speed," Mr. Markey said. "The body is only an entity of vibrations induced by electrons which act harmoniously when normal. If this vibration disharmonizes, we find disease development."

MOVIE GOSSIP

BLIGH Four Acts of Vaudeville Gladys Walton in "THE LOVE LETTER" LIBERTY Mitchell O'Halloran "The Tents of Allah" OREGON "The Heart Raider"

screen fan will enjoy. The supporting cast is excellent. Jeanette Helen Porter, the charming and attractive daughter of Gene Stratton Porter, the famous author of many novels and nature books including "Michael O'Halloran," "The Girl of the Limberlost," "Laddie," "The Harvester," "Her Father's Daughter," etc., has deserted the social life for a career in moving pictures.

TACKMAN & RUTH, an artistic duo of terpsichorean artists whose mannerisms and ability show training, experience and class. Their repertoire of dance numbers practically include all known styles and many new, novel and original ideas in dancing. Their offering is lively from start to finish showing many changes of costume and beautiful scenery and effects which will make it an enthralling offering. At the Bligh today.

WARD & DE VOE, two recent recruits from the Musical Comedy field are presenting a light and entertaining offering of song and steps. Their comedy is clean and snappy. Their whistling finish will put them over for a solid applause hit on the current bill of vaudeville. At the Bligh today.

WILLARD—One of the greatest novelties in the management world comes to the local vaudeville theatre this week. Willard "The Man Who Grows," completing the seventh world tour is presenting his enthralling demonstration of growing. This man through control of unused muscles can make himself grow seven and one-half inches, and shorten himself five inches. His present engagement is his farewell tour of the United States as he returns to Australia on his arrival on the Pacific coast. At the Bligh today.

As a feature to make the patrons of the theatre forget their troubles and have some good hearty wholesome laughs Nat & Jackie Farnum with "Strut," will offer their act, "The Mode Shop." Nat Farnum is the originator of Clown night in Vaudeville, and everyone knows him as "Tokum." Jackie Farnum is a pretty young miss and a favorite of Musical Comedy and is considered one of the best dressed misses of vaudeville. Her costumes out do Zigzag's Frolics or a Winter Garden Show. "Strut" is a colored character, a sensational dancer who is recognized as one of the greatest dancers of his race. At the Bligh today.

BROKEN PLEDGES

What have our government and our people done to carry out the pledge made in 1918 that we were taking part in the World war for the purpose of making father wars impossible? Some of us may consider that we have kept the faith; but that opinion is not shared outside the United States.

brunt of the battle against German militarism in the World war to make that war the means of putting an end to the curse of armed international conflicts. One has but to read the dispatches in any issue of any American newspaper that is a member of one of the great press news associations to discover how far that pledge has been disregarded.

In the eyes of the world outside we have assumed an attitude of armed isolation. Other peoples expected that the treaties signed at Washington limiting naval armaments would be followed by a second disarmament conference. But no such request has been received from Washington; and the spokesmen for the British government intimated that such a proposal from Great Britain would not be kindly received, either by France or our own government.

Such an assertion would lack sincerity, in the face of the events that have happened since 1918. Our government declined to ratify the president's signature to the Treaty of Versailles. The treaty pledging support to France in case of another German invasion was not even presented to the senate. We declined to enter the League of Nations; and we have not yet accepted membership in the International Court of Justice.

Against this long array of debts there is but a single credit, although one of major importance. Our government took the lead in calling the conference of Washington; and that conference placed a limitation on naval armaments and negotiated other treaties that dispelled the war clouds from the Pacific area.

When the French crossed the Rhine in January to enter the Ruhr every country in Europe began to strengthen its land forces and to accumulate supplies of war. The smaller nations are beginning to resemble armed camps. They have so increased their land forces that, despite the limitations of the armed force of Germany, there are more soldiers under arms in Europe than on the first of July, 1914.

The little nations carved out of what was once Austrian territory have a combined armed force about double that of Austria in the beginning of 1914.

And now comes the announcement that the British government cannot call a disarmament conference by reason of the attitude of the United States. In place of aiding in the restoration of permanent peace we are put in the light of obstructionists. This is perhaps unfair; but our failure to join the league of nations furnishes at least a pretext for other nations to lay the blame upon us. The majority who favored joining the league are forced to suffer for the selfishness and narrow mindedness of the minority which succeeded in blocking the greatest effort ever made by the nations of the world to destroy war before war destroys our present civilization. And no one can truthfully say, in the face of existing conditions in Europe and Asia, that our civilization is not menaced.

MILITARY PICNIC NOT HELD TODAY

Event At Clackamas Rifle Range Postponed In Respect To Harding

The reunion and picnic of the 162nd Infantry Veterans association which was scheduled to have taken place today at the Clackamas rifle range, has been postponed until Sunday, Aug. 19, according to an announcement made by Major Harry C. Brumbaugh, president of the association.

Postponement of the affair was ordered by Major Brumbaugh following a conference with members of the association, as a mark of respect to the memory of the departed President Harding. August 19 was selected as the substitute date on account of it being the last day of the state rifle and pistol competition, at which time Governor Pierce, General White and many other prominent state and municipal officials will be present. Several thousand people are expected to be at the Clackamas rifle range at that time to witness the competition for the Governor's trophy which will be competed for by three teams from the various branches of the service of the Oregon national guard. Governor Pierce will personally present the governor's trophy to the winning team.

Jobs For 283 Listed At Y.M.C.A. Employment Office

During the past week jobs for 283 men were listed with the United States local employment bureau at the Salem Y. M. C. A. Not all these places were filled, but 119 were, and 127 men were referred to other jobs, without a final report as to whether they landed or not.

An interesting fact is noted in the showing that more men were definitely placed or referred to jobs in the woods, than there were new registrations or calls for help. There were some unfilled hang-over calls for men from the previous week. The world isn't hunting chauffeurs. They seem to be a drug on the market, despite the number of flippers on the streets. While 10 men registered as chauffeurs, only one actually got a job from the Y list, and one other was referred.

One nurse registered for a position and was placed. Two women cooks were also placed out of the four who registered. Eighteen women registered for dairy, garden and farm work, and 15 of these were placed without trouble. The total number of registrations, both men and women, was 196, and 138 actually found jobs during the week.

Salem And Hood River Meet In Tennis Today

Four Salem men will compete today on the Multnomah club courts with Hood River tennis players. The Salem players are Dr. C. E. Bates, Roy Okerberg, Paul Rice and William Walsh. By defeating Oregon City last Sunday Hood River won the right to meet the Salem team which defeated McMinnville. The game today is for the championship of the Willamette valley outside of Portland.

Real fall weather. Salem finally arrives. It is the Salem way. She is going to have splendid hospital facilities.

In a little while Salem will be filling up preparatory to the opening of the schools. All the new houses will be needed.

A Chicago girl fainted three times on receiving the news that she had won a beauty contest. A cynic says it is a dangerous thing to tell a Chicago girl she is pretty—it is likely to affect her heart. It will not be so if one of the Salem beauties wins in the Petaluma Egg Day queen contest. Our girls rightfully take such compliments as a matter of course.

It is an Oregon product, and it has raised the reputation of the prune the world over and placed it in the class of food for the gods.

The Canadian flax puller, out near West Stayton, is working 14 hours a day, and doing more than was expected of it. The back-breaking work of hand-pulling will soon be a drudgery relegated to the limbo of the past. Mr. Bartram, one of the owners of the machine, is in Winnipeg, on his way here to see his machine at work. It will be kept going 20 days or more yet.

There is some flax being pulled by hand on the A. E. Bradley place, a mile south of Aumsville, that Robert Crawford, superintendent of the flax industry at the penitentiary, pronounces as some of the very finest ever produced. It is from pedigreed seed.

five bushels of it, furnished by the United States department of agriculture. It is being very carefully harvested. Many favorable things are conspiring together to push forward the flax industry in the Salem district—not the least being machine pulling. Some day this will be the greatest industry in Oregon. It will make a big city out of Salem, supplying the fine linens of commerce—bringing here eventually a hundred million dollars a year.

The Oregon Growers are doing a great work for the west, in preaching their gospel of confidence and stability, by redoubling their efforts to present to the trade the producers' attitude and the ultimate consumers' need of stabilized prices based on confidence as well as supply and demand.
