PUGILISTIC MUSIC PLAYED BY FIRPO

Sparring Partners are Unable to Stop Attacks and Blows Placed

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 27.—(By the Associated Press).—Using the same 16-ounce mitts that failed to soften the punches landed on Downey at Indianapolis several weeks ago, Luis Angel Firpo, challenger for the heavyweight boxing title, played pugilistic music on three sparring partners today in his daily workout.

Low, dull notes he sounded on stomach, arms and body; he struck a higher pitch with half open gloves on jaw and head, and rendered perfect crescendo on chins. Lefts were accompanied by rights and the critics said his technique was first rate. He played two syncopated numbers and one funeral march.

Jeff Clark, the "Black Ghost" of Joplin, tuned like a banjo, and young Frank Koebele of Brooklyn were instruments used in the fast numbers while Joe McCann, the Newark bass drum was thumped in the other.

Luis Angel failed to strike correctly on several occasions with the Joplin banjo, for the "ghost" was unusually elusive, but there were only a few blue notes. The "ghost" hummed for half a minute after Firpo twanged his chin with right, brought cleanly from the shoulder in a graceful arc.

Lavalle announced that the services of Billy Miske, the St. Paul heavy weight, were being sought for sparring work. The trainer also is seeking several light men, but would not name them.

"barkers" and the "hog" knives, has just been installed. It grinds six knives at a time, and is automatic and mathematically perfect in its action. The "barkers" are the machines that trim off all the bark from the wood before it goes in to the "hog" or pulping machine. There are 20 7-inch knives set equidistant in a radial or spoke-like fashion in the face of a two-ton motor wheel, against which the bark-covered pieces are laid and the bark shaved off with almost lightning rapidity. The difference of a few ounces in the weight of one knife disturbs the balance of the machine so as to make the whole building shiver like the ague. For this reason the knives are all ground in sets, so that all in a set are ground to like size with every change. A set of knives lasts a day for each grinding, though sometimes in the bark they strike bits of gravel and take out sections big as a finger nail that have to be ground out before the knives are used again.

A pile of white fir wood, containing already almost 800 cords, and laid out so as to make 1500 cords when the yard is full, is being heaped up for storage on the river bank south of the wood mill of the Oregon Pulp & Paper factory.

The company has been storing thousands of cords of wood on Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets, where the wood was unloaded from the Southern Pacific track running east from Salem. This necessitated an expensive rehandling, either to load it back on the cars or on trucks to bring it to the mill as needed. Under the new system, just installed, the cord wood comes directly to the mill, where it is all cut up into billet lengths and run on a long elevated carrier 50 feet high into the stack yard where it is held ready for feeding into the pulp machines. It will be brought back into the mill on another belt conveyor, with a fraction of the handling that was necessary under the old uptown yarding system.

Nearby the Dimick farm is the poultry farm of C. R. Quinn who also has some wonderful Reds and who assists in the management of the Dimick poultry plant.

The fifth district meet of the Rhode Island Red club will be held in conjunction with the International Livestock exposition poultry department this fall, November 3-10 at Portland, which will be the largest and best of the poultry shows of the northwest this season. New coops have been provided, the building has been enlarged and every modern convenience added to make the poultry division of the great International Livestock show the desired success.

Former Salem Woman Assists in Finding Aid for Girls From Manchuria

Mrs. Nellie L. Lamber, whom many people in Salem will remember is the talented wife of a former head of Willamette university, writes an appealing story from the Seattle YWCA where she has a position.

Last week she went to the ocean docks and assisted in caring for 178 Russian refugees who had just landed from Harbin, Manchuria. They are not bolsheviks, nihilists or trouble makers. They represent some of the best blood of Russia, scattered by the great war. Most of them are young people, grown up during or since the breaking of the war, nine years ago. Most of them are orphans, or at least they do not know where to find their people. Some are of noble, even royal blood. They had drifted into Harbin, where they formed a students' association. They all wanted to come to America—there are 500,000 young Russians ready for university work, and not a Russian school to go to—but there was money and room for only a few. They pool their finances, those who have money or jobs sending a percentage of their earnings to help yet others come to America.

There are seven Russian girls in the "consignment" for Mrs. Lambert. She is to find educational homes for them. Last year she placed one girl at McMinnville. This year she has seven times as many to provide for. She is especially anxious of finding a place for some of these young women at Willamette. They are not weaklings, not peons or tramps. They are well-bred, ambitious, grateful, delightful young people anxious to learn and serve the world. They would be beautiful daughters for childless homes.

President Doney of Willamette would be glad to hear from any home who would wish to consider taking one of these refugee girls. Mrs. Lambert writes in lavish terms of their gratitude to the prospective homes of America, and of their looks and acts. If there are vacant homes in Salem, that would be lightened up by a girlish smile and a worshipping love, the homes need wait no longer, according to Mrs. Lambert, for the light and the love is ready to come on call.

Former Salem Liveryman Dies at Roseburg Home

Benjamin Shelby Radabaugh, of Roseburg, died Saturday morning as the result of a stroke of paralysis. Mr. Radabaugh was born April 23, 1845, in Gilmore Putnam county, Ohio. He enlisted in Company B 51st Ohio regiment during the Civil war and served with bravery until the end of that struggle. He was married October 11, 1874, to Ellen Nickum, who survives him. They moved to Oregon in 1891, locating in Salem, where Mr. Radabaugh conducted a livery stable business for a number of years, moving to Roseburg in 1907. They had made their home in Roseburg continuously since that time. Besides his widow Mr. Radabaugh leaves two brothers, George Radabaugh of Long Prairie, Minn., and Peter Radabaugh of Roseburg and one slater, Mrs. V. S. Patterson of this city; also two half sisters, Mrs. Emma Richardson and Elva Radabaugh of Rochester, Minn. The funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the undertaking parlors, Rev. C. H. Hilton, pastor of the Christian church, of which the deceased was a member, officiating. Interment will take place in the I. O. O. F. cemetery.
