A special musical treat was offered the students of the Willamette university yesterday at the chapel service when Miss Nellie Fox of Portland presented them with a group of songs from light opera and modern composers. The full tones and the wide range of her pleasing mezzo-soprano voice were particularly effective in "The Blind Girl's Song," from the opera "La Gioconda," and in "Obstination," by D. E. Foote. "The Two Magpies," by Wells, and "Salsan," by Long, were enthusiastically received.

It was through the efforts of Elyan Arnold, a prominent student musician here, that she was brought to the chapel services. Miss Fox is a well known singer in Portland where she has appeared in concert a number of times in the Portland auditorium. During the past spring she was soloist for the Apollo club of Vancouver.

Mrs. Orville Perry and daughter Joyce, of Silverton, are visiting this week in Salem at the home of Mr. and Mrs. U. G. Perry.

Miss Sroat is a former Salem resident, and during her two week's stay in the city will visit with a number of friends and relatives. She has spent most of the summer in Portland during which time she made a number of short trips to Salem.

After a few very informal party invitations were issued from the various high school societies Monday night bidding the new students to membership. The answers were accepted late last night.

The many friends of Mrs. F. D. Eason will be interested to learn that she has taken up her music very seriously and is studying with David Campbell in Portland this winter. While in Salem Mrs. Eason was identified with the modern arts section of the Salem Arts League, and was the author of a number of clever stories while with the section. At the present time Mrs. Eason is living in Sandy where she is conducting a class in music composition among the high school students there. Each Saturday the class meets at her home to play the compositions they have written during the week.

Incidentally, it isn't ever drenched with perfume, that handkerchief. The well-dressed woman chooses a subtle delicate scent and applies it in some way that isn't localized. Perhaps she puts it in her hair, or wears it in a little sachet, or dabs a bit behind each ear—there's a score of ways—but in any case, she keeps you guessing as to just what the faint fragrance is, and how she wears it. Frequently she blends her own perfume by mixing several odors, experimenting till she has something that completely satisfies her. The recipe is her own secret, and pleases her much better than the fabulously expensive things that mere money can buy—and anyone may use—or over-use.

Coiffures and hats

We can't stop to talk about coiffures, other than to say that the very smartest thing today is the acne of simplicity—the hair drawn back smoothly and coiled low. But if one's face and temperament can't stand this, then be sure that the marcel or the permanent wave (large and loose, please) is used as a basis for something suave in line as possible. "Ear muffs" never were worn by smart women, to be sure, but now even the sophisticated little girl has abandoned them in favor of a more simple and beautiful outline. Evening coiffures, of course, may be quite elaborate—but then, anything is possible after the lights are lit in these days.

Having done her hair for the street, the well-dressed woman doesn't put on her hat while she runs downstairs, as so many women in the background of the crowd appear to have done. She spends a concentrated moment before her mirror, adjusting it as carefully as the ventouse did when she first tried it on. She knows that the line of a good hat is good just so long as it is fitted to the right head, at the right angle. She is very-quick to notice when the chick little brim is losing its flare, or the bows are drooping. There is nothing so tired as a tired hat. If it can't be resuscitated, one must reluctantly drop it overboard and buy another.

POWELL SCORES PART OF PRESS

International Mind Necessary to Study Big Questions Honestly

Misleading statements in the nation's newspapers that seek to influence the minds of the population were scored by Dr. G. E. Powell of Kimball school of Theology in his address to the Kiwanis club at its regular luncheon Tuesday noon. Dr. Powell spoke upon the result that Kiwanis and similar organizations might obtain in connection with international affairs.

"First in the matter of importance is the international mind," Dr. Powell said. "This is necessary before we can help ourselves or the rest of the world. National narrowness in the large newspapers of the country is lamentable. It does matter in America what takes place even in the heart of Africa and we can no longer live a life of isolation as we are bound together in one cause. Having once created the international mind we can approach questions of international importance with honesty."

Three main issues were discussed by the speaker, who touched upon the league of nations, the world court and the Ruhr situation. Hours would be necessary to give a real explanation of these issues, he said.

"Unblinking lying," was characteristic on the parts of both opponents and proponents of the league of nations," Dr. Powell declared. "The argument that Great Britain had six votes to one for the United States was described as utterly false, and an examination of the constitution of the league would prove this, he said. In the assembly Great Britain, including her colonies, has six votes, while the United States, with lands under her jurisdiction has seven votes. In the council, or upper body of the house, each has one vote.

"Germany is more prosperous today and in better condition from a standpoint of agriculture, new buildings, bridges and roads than is the United States," Dr. Powell said in commenting upon the Ruhr. "Germany has the power but not the mind to pay its indebtedness. If compelled to it could raise its $40,000,000,000 indemnity in half an hour. Public utilities have advanced in leaps and bounds during the last five years. There are no signs of repentance upon Germany's part. I would like to believe that its withdrawal of passive resistance was a sign of repentance, but I cannot do so. I fear it did so merely because it realized that it had committed a great blunder. France's only hope of collecting from Germany is by force. France is morally right in its occupation."

TRAINS SUBMERGED IN RAGING RIVER IN WYOMING.

Photo shows the Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy train No. 30, which plunged into the raging torrent of the flooded Cole Creek near Casper, Wyoming. Many lives were lost and more than a score injured. The cause of the accident was due to a weakened bridge after a terrific cloudburst had struck throughout Wyoming. The engine and tender of the train are submerged while a chair can be seen piled on the wreckage of a mail car. Arrow points to the legs of an unfortunate who was stealing a ride. His body was found pinned to the under structure.
