William Duncan in "Playing It Wild"

GRAND
"Why Worry?"

LIBERTY
"Brass Bottle"

Helene Chadwick plays the leading feminine role in "Quick Sands," the new picture by Howard Hawks which comes to the Liberty theater Friday with a powerful cast including Richard Dix, Alan Hale, Noah Beery, J. Farrell McDonald, Walter Long, Edwin Stevens, Frank Campeau, George Cooper, Dick Sutherland, Hardee Kirkland and a dozen other payers noted for vivid acting.

Miss Chadwick in this excellent company, many of whom are veterans of the stage as well as the screen, holds her own, as might be expected of a young actress who has made remarkable strides in the past few years. It is to her credit that she chose to develop herself as an artist rather than remain one of the many pretty girls of the screen. Today she ranks with the commanding figures who really depict emotions instead of smiling and only looking pretty.

It has been hard work, and her present high place is all the more remarkable when it is remembered that only a few years ago she earned a livelihood by posing for advertisements. She got her first chance in pictures with Pathe and has steadily advanced ever since. She will always be remembered in two of the several Rupert Hughes pictures, "Dangerous Curve Ahead" and "Scratch My Back" and in "The Dust Flower" "Godless Men," besides many other important productions made in the past four years.

Helene Chadwick was born at Chadwick, N. Y., a town founded by an ancestor who came from England. But she has become so completely identified with motion pictures that she is really well known to the film colony in New York and Los Angeles as she is in her home town.

Her role in "Quick Sands" is one of the most interesting that has fallen to her lot. Yet to describe it would give away a secret of the picture which had better be kept from those who would enjoy it to its utmost. Enough to say that Helene Chadwick plays a dual role, that of a delightful American girl and a sharp-eyed Mexican senorita involved in one of the most thrilling stories ever pictured on the screen.

"The Lone Star Ranger," the famous best-seller by Zane Grey which has been made into a motion picture by William Fox with Tom Mix in the starring role, has been read by more than 10 million people since its publication in 1915, according to Harper Brothers, publishers.

The noted author's work has been through more than seventeen editions and from the demand that still exists it is likely that it will pass through many more before it is finally shelved.

The book has been translated in many foreign languages and found fertile soil in the readers of these countries. The film will be shown at the Oregon theater beginning tomorrow night.

"In 'Why Worry?' Harold Lloyd's first attempt at farce comedy, the popular Pathe comedian plays the part of a young man who worries so much over imaginary troubles that he fails to recognize real ones all about him. It is said that the manner in which he becomes embroiled in a South American revolution offers greater possibilities for laughs and 'gags' than any of the previous Lloyd comedies. The public can judge for itself when 'Why Worry?' will be shown at the Grand theater for 5 days, starting tonight.

"Let's have some fun and teach this movie actress that she's not in it with a real cowpuncher," exclaimed one of a group of real cowboys used for scenes in "Playing It Wild," a William Duncan and Edith Johnson picture, which will be shown at the Bligh theater today. They were assembled on location awaiting orders to go on the trail in the wake of Edith Johnson, and had their own opinions as to the ability of the average picture star when it comes to doing real riding.

When all was in readiness and the chase started, the cowboys let out a whoop and were away down the trail doing all sorts of reckless stunts. But the leading woman outtraced them and showed them stunts they could not do themselves.

FARM REMINDERS
FROM THE COLLEGE

Potatoes for Hogs, Ration for Dairy Cows, the Hungarian Vetch Is Good

(The following paragraphs are from a current bulletin from the department of industrial journalism of the Oregon Agricultural college.)

Cull potatoes afford an opportunity to cheapen the ration for hogs. Four hundred pounds of cooked or 600 pounds of raw potaatoes will replace 100 pounds of the average feed grains. They should be fed in combination with grain at the rate of 4 pounds cooked to one of ground grain, or 2 pounds of raw to 1 pound of ground grain. Potatoes do not give the best results when fed without grain. The grain should not be cooked but added when the potatoes are somewhat cooked. Other root or vegetable crops that are unsalable can be profitably utilized as hog feed. Judgment must be used, as they are all watery. Feed with grain to obtain best results.

A ration is recommended by the dairy department of the experiment station assuming that dairy owners have legume hay such as clover, alfalfa, or oats, and vetch and corn silage. All the hay and silage the cow will clean up should be given in addition to 1 pound each day of the following ration for each 3 1/2 pounds of milk produced: Three hundred pounds each of barley, oats and mill run, with 100 pounds of a high protein concentrate such as linseed oil meal, cotton seed or cocoanut meal. If kale is available it may be fed in addition to other feeds with excellent results.

Hungarian vetch is well suited to the soils a little too heavy or too sour or too cold or wet for common vetch. The Hungarian vetch stands the more severe winter conditions in the lower Willamette valley counties.

WE'RE ALL HUMAN AT THAT

For several years a Salem man has burdened his upper lip with a mustache. It was an offensive piece of adornment and his family and friends had grown reconciled to it. Of course there had been times when his wife had pleaded, cajoled, bewailed and threatened, but the mustache had survived and the world had come to regard it as a fixture.

One night, not so very long ago, the owner of the mustache decided the time had arrived for facial renovation. The good wife and other members of the family have long since retired. To the bathroom the mustache, and quite naturally its owner, journeyed. A brief glance in the glass, a bit of lather, the razor and once more his upper lip stood brazen and bare to public gaze.

He would slip into bed and the next morning at the breakfast table he would find which of his family was the most observing. He slipped into bed and soon slipped into sleep.

It was a moonlight night and some hours later, a shrill shriek pierced the quiet of the household. From every bedroom stumbled members of the family. They found "Mom" trembling in the hall.

During the early morning hours she had awakened. She had turned toward her spouse and there in the moonlight lay "another" man. Explanations were made all around, but there is another mustache being groomed in this town.

That's all.
