Booth-Kelly Mill to Open
 SPRINGFIELD, Or., Nov. 15.—The Booth-Kelly mill has been shut down temporarily from last Saturday until today, due to the necessary work on the dam. The planing mill resumed operations today. A temporary retaining wall was erected and banked with dirt so that the mill pond could be refilled for use today. Work on this dam is only going on Sundays and other days when the mill is not in operation. This fact has caused the work to be slow. In the mill pond are about 1,200,000 feet of logs waiting to be cut. The mill turns out about 165,000 feet of lumber a day.

A new set of machinery has been installed in the mill. It is a new trim saw on the unstacker transfer. It will take care of all untrimmed lumber before it goes to the dry sheds. Men are working on new ramp boxes which will be put on Ford truck beds. These boxes are something which has never been tried before. They fit on the bed, and have a slip bottom. After the truck has been loaded and hauled to where it wishes to dump its load a lever slips the side of the box out and the load falls through a release door. These boxes will be used to haul dirt from the hillside to fill the dam.

The mill will work steadily through the winter months and the export work is very nearly completed and will be shipped soon.

now that the circulars giving the descriptions of the brothers have been distributed over the Pacific coast, suspects are being picked up in many states. A watch is still being maintained on the Siskiyou forests, but this is such a wild and impenetrable region, experienced woodsmen could elude capture for weeks. It is expected that the hearing of the evidence in the train robbery will be among the last matters taken up by the present session of the grand jury.—Medford Mail-Tribune.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

Copyright 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

CHAPTER 24.
 THE WAY DICKY "SIZED UP" BESS DEAN.

I think there is no feeling sweeter to a wife than the knowledge that her husband is her champion even in little things, that—in juvenile parlance—he is "on her side" in any controversy. If more husbands understood this feminine quirk instead of assuming, as so many of them appear to do, that the wife's side of a contest must be the wrong side, the divorce mill, I like to fancy, would have many idle hours.

There was a warm little rush to my heart at Ricky's recital of the way he had circumvented Bess Dean's pretty attempt to purchase a pair of sneakers for me two sizes too large. Impetuously I put my arms around his neck, pulled down his head to mine and kissed him.

"I know it's silly to care what size I wear," I said, "but it was awfully dear of you to—"

"Dear—nothing!" Dicky rejoined, kissing me warmly. "If you think that daughter of wicked wiles is going to stage anything like that and get away with it while I'm around you have another think coming, that's all. And while we're about it let me issue another old tomato can. This fool fishing excursion tonight is the last stunt—POSITIVE-LY, with a long 'I'—that I share with your foxy friend. I'll go through with the thing tonight till the last candle is electrocuted, but nothing more digging in this direction. If she doesn't vamoose, I'm going to get a sudden wire and beat it till she's gone."

"I Can Tell—"

"Oh, don't do that, Dicky!" I implored. "She only has a few days more."

"Can't help it," he declared inexorably. "Me—I have spoke!" He struck himself theatrically on the breast. "D'ye remember old Betty's slogan? Enough am enough, but dis am sumpin else again!"

"I remember," I said, laughing in spite of myself at his imitation of Lillian's old servant. "But I wish—"

"Don't do it," he interrupted. "Save your breath. What the devil do you suppose ails that girl, anyway?" He pulled me down beside him on a settee, rolled himself a cigarette and lit it. I saw that he was in a reflective mood, so I did not interrupt his train of thought with an answer, for I knew he neither needed nor expected one.

"I used to think Bess Dean a mighty attractive girl," he said, "and she is, in many respects. Mighty easy to look at, bright, keen, unusually good talker, game for anything—but, say, what's the matter with her? She gets on my nerves. Now I can tell, any man can, that she isn't really attracted in the least by yours truly, yet she manages always to rope me alongside when there's any stunt going on. What's the answer?"

This time he stopped short and looked at me expectantly.

Lillian is Troubled.

"You have summed up her qualities wonderfully," I said slowly, "except in one thing. Bess Dean isn't game for everything, that is, she plays the game everywhere, but with other women. There she lets her ruling passion—vanity—get the better of her. She cannot bear to see any admiration addressed to another woman, even when the person proffering it is the other woman's husband. There are lots of women like her. There isn't any real harm in her, but— I can't explain it—she gets on my nerves, too."

"In other words, she's a goat-getter," Dicky stretched his arm, yawned, and I knew the discussion was at an end. "But she isn't going to attack my nanny or yours after this evening. What tonight will bring forth, the Lord only knows."

He strolled away, and I sat quietly for a few minutes, idly wondering what Bess Dean would say if some "power the gift was" her to hear Dicky's strictures! Lillian's soft call at the door roused me, and I welcomed her gladly.

"You'll think I've taken leave of the little sense that's left me," she said whimsically, "when I tell you my errand."

"I'll promise not to judge you too harshly," I laughed, drawing a chair up near my low table. "Suppose we get real devilish and have a cup of tea while you unburden your soul."

"You're a wiz, Madge. I knew I wanted something, but I hadn't brains enough to find out what it was. Now I know it's a cup of your tea."

I lit my tiny canned-heat contrivance, put my doll-sized kettle over the blaze, brought out my tea service, and some slices of cake with which, thoughtful Mrs. Cosgrove kept me supplied. And when the water had boiled down as we had done so many times before, to that most potent of feminine nerve soothers, a cup of tea.

"Now you may speak," I laughed, as we finished our third cup, and the last crumb of cake.

"What's on your alleged mind?" as Dicky says.

New Governors Elected, By Realty Association

Adoption of the multiple listing bureau constitution and by-laws; election of a board of governors and a change in name occupied the Marion-Polk County Realty association at its regular luncheon Thursday. The board of governors, consisting of five members, is John Scott, W. G. Krueger, George H. Grabenhorst, A. C. Bjornstet and Karl Becke.

In accordance with the national board, the association changed the word "Realtors" to "Realty," it being pointed out that the first word applied more to individuals engaged in the real estate business than the latter.

The association endorsed the proposal of a clear field next year when the YMCA conduct its drive for funds to erect a new building on its lot on Court street.

Magyar embroidery extremely bright and odd in design is among the novel trimmings popular today for the still fashionable over blouse. The white voile blouse is smarter at the moment than the blouse of crepe de china.

There are certain of the season's colors which look especially well under electric light, particularly if the material be velvet. These shades include sapphire, cherry and orange so pale as to be almost yellow and flame.

NEW LAMP BURNS 94% AIR
 Beats Electric or Gas

A new oil lamp that gives an amazing brilliant, soft, white light, even better than gas or electricity, has been tested by the U. S. Government and 35 leading universities and found to be superior to 10 ordinary oil lamps. It burns without odor, smoke or noise—no pumping up, is simple, clean and safe. Burns 94% air and 6% common kerosene (coal oil). The inventor, V. M. Johnson, 161 Union Ave. N., Portland, Ore., is offering to send a lamp on 10 days' FREE trial, or even to give one FREE to the first user in each locality who will help him introduce it. Write him today for full particulars. Also ask him to explain how you can get the agency, and without experience or money make $250 to $500 per month.

HOFF TO QUIT IS RUMOR HERE

Friends Deny He Will Resign—Declare Loyalty to Party Will Prevent

A rumor has reached Salem that State Treasurer O. P. Hoff, who has been ill for many months, will resign in the next 10 days and that Governor Pierce will appoint Jefferson Myers of Portland to succeed him.

Mr. Hoff is at present in Portland under care of physicians, and has not been able to attend to official duties for many months. While his illness is severe, it is said that his condition is not necessarily dangerous for the reason that he has no organic ailment. His nervous condition, however, is said to be bad and at times he suffers much pain from neuritis.

It was first reported that in event of the resignation of Mr. Hoff the governor would appoint Robert E. Smith of Portland as his successor, but Myers now appears to be the governor's choice. Smith played exceedingly close to the governor early in his administration and was around the executive offices much of the time, but of late months has not been here. Myers is a member of the advisory committee to the state irrigation and drainage securities commission and his policies relative to reclamation are in the main harmonious with those of the governor.

Friends of Mr Hoff here scout the rumor that he will resign and said they felt sure that he would not resign because of his loyalty to the Republican party.

"If he were to resign," said one of them, "the governor would appoint Jefferson Myers as state treasurer, and that would give the state a Democratic administration."

This was the opinion expressed by some who have visited Mr Hoff recently in Portland.
