EGG ASSOCIATION NOW IN BALANCE

By TED EMERSON, Market Editor, Portland Telegram

Two hundred and fifty thousand hens or quill! Unless the poultry producers in Oregon sign up that number of hens by January 1, the egg association will shut down. Thus has the management of the co-operative egg association put the proposition squarely up to the poultrymen throughout the state.

It is up to the producers. The association hangs in the balance. Whether the poultrymen will continue to market their eggs in an orderly manner at good prices or demoralize the industry in Oregon remains with the producer.

Manager E. J. Dixon and the association directors have come out flat footed on the proposition. They have made it plain that there will be no half way methods or compromises in the association.

The contracts plainly state that they will be null and void unless 250,000 hens are secured. Up to the present time approximately 165,000 hens have been signed up by the growers. That means that 85,000 additional hens will have to be signed up in the next three weeks if the association is to continue.

"There are several millions of hens in the state producing eggs," Manager Dixon stated this morning. If at least 250,000 are not in the association then there would be no use of co-operative marketing. No co-operative organization can hope to be successful unless there is a large percentage of the producers back of it.

"Such is not the case with Pacific Co-operative Poultry Producers. There are large poultrymen in the state who are not members of the association, but heartily in favor of it because the organization keeps market conditions good for their outlet. These producers will have to come into the association in the next three weeks or they will find 800 other producers on the open market trying to get rid of their eggs."

It is not up to the old members alone. If every one of them renewed their contracts it would still take several thousand new hens to make the 250,000 quota. The old members realize this and they are not only renewing their contracts but working among their neighbors to get as many new members as possible.

The association has carried large ads in the papers this week notifying growers throughout the state of their intended action of closing down. They have conducted a series of meetings throughout the poultry districts to acquaint the producer with conditions.

Almost phenomenal results have been attained by the Pacific Co-operative Poultry Producers during the past 12 months. A year ago the association was heavily in debt and badly disorganized. Returns were poor. It was ready to go on the rocks. Then there was a complete reorganization and change of management. Since then the members have not only received top market prices for their eggs, but something like $15,000 of the former indebtedness has been wiped out. On top of this a large part of the common stock has been purchased back from members.

The new contracts are for a five-year period, but has a clause that entitles the member an opportunity to resign each year upon three months notice.

MEAT RECEIPTS GIVEN ATTENTION

Meat recipes have heretofore received less attention than baking recipes, probably because an indefinite meat recipe could "get by" better than an uncertain baking recipe, and the housewife could use her own judgment about the ingredients she put in, and cook the meat as long as she thought it needed cooking.

Home economics experts who have edited Frye's Meat Guide say that it is a new departure in recipe books. It gives information on meat buying, showing the charts of the different cuts with instructions on how much meat to buy for each serving, and instructions on how to choose good meat.

Over a hundred recipes are given, including many new and unusual recipes for ham, bacon, sausage and "extra parts" as well as for fresh meat. The recipes have been tested by home economics experts and are mostly for economical, every-day use, although directions are included for such holiday dishes as baked ham and roast turkey.

The housewife who entertains often at luncheon or supper will be especially interested in the directions for making unusual meat salads out of ordinary ingredients. Ten combinations of ingredients as harmonious as chicken, celery and olives in tomato cups are suggested.

The woman who is far from fresh meat markets will appreciate the many recipes for making ham or bacon the foundation for a good meal, bacon boiled dinners for instance, in which vegetables are given meat flavor and richness by being boiled with bacon. The different forms of sausage, which are easily kept on hand, make the beginning for such appetizing supper dishes, as Head Cheese with Onions.

Frye's Meat Guide is just off the press and now ready for distribution to interested housewives. To secure a copy send a two-cent stamp (to cover cost of mailing) with your name and address to Frye and Company, Seattle, Washington.

STOCK STRENGTH ONLY MODERATE

Large Volume Absorbed After an Early Period of Irregularity

Total stock sales 1,238,000 shares. Twenty industrials averaged 93.82; net gain .90. High 1923, 105.38; low 85.76. Twenty railroads averaged 85.25; net gain .04. High 1923, 99.51; low 79.53.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Stock prices developed moderate strength in today's active market after an early period of irregularity in which the market was called upon to absorb another large volume of realizing sales. Some exceptionally sharp gains took place in the industrial and specialty lists General Electric being one of the outstanding features with a net gain of 8 1-4 points on the day. New York Central came to the front in the railroad group, touching 106 1-2, a new high record for the year, and closing slightly below that figure for a net gain of 1 3-4 points.

Early selling was influenced somewhat by the sharp reactions in foreign exchanges traceable to the failure of the conservative party to obtain a majority in the British general elections. Wall street was impressed, however, by the general favorable reaction of business and banking leaders to President Coolidge's address to congress, and good shipping orders were placed in the market by powerful financial interests in the early hours of trading. Commission houses also reported increased public participation, but it is generally agreed that this has not yet reached sufficient proportions to become a determining factor in the establishment of quoted values.

Heavy buying of the automotive issues was based on reports that November output was the highest ever recorded in that month and 32 per cent above that of November 1922 and speculative expectations of big sales at the winter shows which begin this month. Reports of high current earnings by some of the accessory companies also were an important factor.

Baldwin was slow in getting under way but it eventually crossed 127 closing just below that for a gain of 1 3-4. United States Steel and American Can improved fractionally.

Reports of revolutionary disturbances in Mexico had a temporary depressing effect on the Pan-American issues but they recovered all the ground lost in the early trading and closed fractionally higher.

Call money at 4 1-2 per cent but advanced to five before the close. More funds came into the time money market with the bulk of the business done at 5 per cent. Commercial paper was fairly active with rates unchanged. Foreign exchanges broke sharply on the British election news but made partial recovery later. Demand sterling sold around $4.26 1-2 most of the day, and French francs around 5.33 cents.

Dr. Crowder Praises Coolidge's Message

Dr. U. S. Crowder of this city has a sort of fad. He has preserved every presidential message delivered to congress since the first Cleveland administration. Yesterday he got them out and

"WHEN I STARTED HOUSEKEEPING"

I thought it would be nice to have fresh home-made bread the way mother and grandmother used to have. But when I tasted Peerless bread, I said to myself, 'What's the use bothering when I can buy bread as good as Peerless and as cheap?'

"Always a bit better"

PEERLESS BAKERY 170 N. Commercial Phone 308

looked them over. The second message of Cleveland is the shortest delivered during that period. The message delivered by President Coolidge comes next. "I have read every message carefully since the Cleveland days," said Dr. Crowder and I unhesitatingly pronounce the message of Calvin Coolidge the best of them all. It is clear, concise and it does not play politics. I admire the courage of the man most of all. He has not played politics nor hesitated to take the full responsibility of every paragraph. The courage of the man is remarkable and his statesmanship will receive general recognition. It was a great document. This opinion is shared by practically all republicans who have read the document.
