Are you buyin' 'em late?

It is too late to buy 'em early.

Old Man Detour, thrown overboard here between Washington and Oregon, was washed ashore at San Diego yesterday. He knew in what state he was needed.

This is prune week. A good week to send a package of the finest prunes ever grown or eaten to your eastern friends. But every week ought to be prune week in this prune paradise.

The slogan editor is having some help in proving in tomorrow's paper that this is the greatest dairy country on earth; and the leading producer of world record cows. The test is the test.

With congress and the English election in one week, and the world still going merrily on, a Salem optimist thinks there is yet hope.

They called him Ped Coshaw in the old school days; and he was a fine fellow then and has kept on being strong along the same line. Now he is to be one of the Oregon supreme judges. That judicial body loses a good and able member and gains another.

Wuxtry, wuxtry, the democrats have elected the mayor in Northampton. President Coolidge's home town. But they have done it for years and years.

secure? This is the time to lay out the big reserve force for the finish. Better to Have Too Many Votes. I want every one of the candidates who have worked faithfully throughout the competition to take this excellent bit of advice. Do not be too self confident. It will be far better to have too many votes than not enough when the judges count the votes to decide who the prize winners will be. It may be that the prize of your choice will be won or lost by you by just an extra vote this week during the triple vote offer. It will be too late to make up for lost time when the prize winners have been announced and someone else carries off the prize that you had set your heart on.

The best advice any one could give you is to keep everlastingly at it and secure your part of the triple votes, while they are still to be had. It pays to make hay while the sun shines.
