

THEATRES MOVIES

OREGON—"Marriage Maker."
LIBERTY—"Mary of the Movies."
BLIGH—"The Fire Bride."
 Musical comedy.

The biggest thrill since the ice scene in "Way Down East" is seen in "Alias Phil Kennedy," the best moving western which comes to the Bligh theater Thursday and Friday. Bill Patton, a new type of western dardevil, as the title character rescues the heroine right at the brink of a waterfall in a scene which will make audiences gasp. Dixie Lamont plays the girl.

At another point in the film he is pursuing the villain, who is day evening, is a picture vehicle of the finest grade and her work in this production is said to surpass anything this charming star has ever done.

Presenting an unusually attractive and novel story in a manner to delight the most blasé screen fan, William C. de Mille's Paramount picture production, "The Marriage Maker," was shown with marked evidences of popular favor at the Oregon theater last night. The picture, in which Agnes Ayres, Jack Holt and Charles de Roche play the leading roles, has exceptional elements of drama, humor and appeal and aside from the interest of its novel theme, its beauty as a production places it in the front rank of the season's successes.

That good should come from him for whom good has been done, often happens. To be true, it happens in "The Shriek of Araby," the latest Mack Sennett comedy feature, an Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation release, to be given its premier at the Grand theater Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The good comes to Ben Turpin, who with Kathryn McGuire, is given the featured role in this production.

Turpin practices the golden rule. "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you." That he is amply repaid for his charity, will be agreed when you witness his reward. Just when everything looked the darkest the poor Arab (as he thought him to be) who he befriended, comes in to the scene and not only saves his life, but makes him the ruler of all Araby.

All But One Packing Plant Here Closed for Season

With the exception of the Kings Products plant, which is now getting out a few large orders for prunes, all of the canneries in the Salem district are closed for the season. The apple pack, the last fruit of the year to be handled by the Kings people, was completed the last of the week.

Other canneries in the district have finished their work for the season, and closed at various times between Thanksgiving and a few days ago. There will be no work at any of these until the cherry season opens up again in the spring.

It is too close to the end of the season to obtain even approximate figures for the entire pack, for all of the canneries are busy now in checking over the 1923 pack and in comparing tonnage and prices this season with those of other seasons in an effort to arrive at an estimate of prices for the coming year. This work will continue until the first of the year, when the complete tonnage of the district can be estimated.

NEW DRIER WILL BE ORGANIZED

First National Bank Takes Over Cunningham Plant; Will Reorganize

With the First National bank taking over the Cunningham drier in West Salem, announcement of a new cooperative canner, with headquarters in Salem, was made yesterday by George F. Rodgers, president of the bank. Immediate steps will be taken to perfect the organization and equip the plant with the necessary machinery in order to get it in shape by spring. The new concern will be organized on a basis of $100,000, with a few farmers in the organization.

Included in the plan of organization are many new constructions, those of a warehouse with an approximate floor space of 100 by 150 feet, a new two-line canner, a fruit drier to be operated along the lines of the past with no charge for that regard. The Cunningham drier is said to be one of the largest on the Pacific coast.

The concern will be conducted along the lines of the present Producers plant on Front street. The men who will form the organization have been carefully selected and the investment is not open to every one. The bank will not have any direct connection with the plant, Mr. Rodgers said yesterday, but no efforts will be spared to put it in first class shape, with no watered stock.

A manager will be selected in the near future, someone from the outside who is thoroughly competent for the position and who has had no connection with any of the canneries here. Care will be taken to obtain the right man and one who will make of the organization a going concern.

Loganberry Growers Will Meet Tomorrow Afternoon

Decision as to what will be the disposition of the loganberry pool will be thrashed out at a special meeting of members of the pool, growers and others interested in the future of the industry at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium at 1:30 o'clock Thursday.

Members of the pool, consisting of H. H. Haynes, of the Salem Bakery, the Capital City Ice & Storage company, the Loganberry growers exchange and the Chamber of Commerce are interested in the two carloads of frozen berries that are now in storage, 50,400 pounds in Chicago and 42,000 in Portland. It is said that the discussion will center around whether or not additional salesmen shall be employed to dispose of the fruit or if the offer received by Mr. Haynes while in the east, be accepted.

According to contracts made by the pool, the growers are to receive 2 1/2 cents a pound for their fruit from the first money received from sales, the remainder to be pro-rated among members of the pool. This meeting is of particular importance to growers, who are anxious to know what action will be taken.

"SAY IT WITH TICKETS"

Thanksgiving season, when the smaller turkeys, ranging between 10 and 12 pounds, were in demand. A few orders for larger-sized fowl have been received, but to no great extent.

Portland commission firms are quoting 25 cents and 26 cents a pound for dressed turkeys, Mr. Andersen reports, having been a business visitor to Portland Monday. This price includes the commission for handling the turkeys. Turkeys are cheap this year, being slightly higher than chickens. It is expected they will be plentiful on the market, with retail prices ranging from 30 cents to 35 cents a pound, dressed.

SALEM MARKETS

Dressed turkeys made their appearance upon the local market yesterday in readiness for the holiday trade. These are corn fed and are said to be excellent birds. Some of the selects are being retailed at 35 cents a pound, with others at 30 cents and 32 cents a pound. There are a few of the poorer quality birds offered at 28 cents a pound. As was the case with the Thanksgiving turkeys, the demand is for the smaller sized birds.
