SOME NEWS ABOUT TWO OLD TIMERS

John Knight Has Suffered a Stroke; Billy Holmes Pays Salem a Visit

One of the Portland papers, in an issue of a few days ago, gave the news that John Knight had suffered a stroke of paralysis, and that Col. J. M. Poorman was given the work Mr. Knight has been doing for many years, as bailiff of the United States court. John Knight was in the early days a member of the Aurora colony. Then he was a blacksmith and wagon maker in Salem. Then he was sheriff of Marion county, and a farmer and onion raiser near Chemawa. He is well known to all old residents of Marion county, who will all be glad to hear of his speedy recovery. He was first exalted ruler of the Salem, Elks' lodge.

W. H. ("Billy") Holmes, the Portland attorney, was a Salem visitor yesterday. Mr. Holmes was a pioneer lawyer of Salem, and he was in the old days very well known in both Marion and Polk counties, and throughout all this part of the state. In fact, in all Oregon. Time is treating Mr. Holmes in a kindly manner, and he is "as young as he used to be" in spirit if not in years.

Booster Addresses Listened to and Needed Amendments Mentioned

Seventy members and guests of the Marion - Polk County Realty association attended the annual business meeting and dinner at the Marion hotel last night at which time an elaborate program was given, with Will H. Moore, state insurance and real estate commissioner, and John L. Brady, as principal speakers, introduced by John H. Scott, new president of the association.

Needed amendments to present laws and the importance of new legislation were pointed out by Mr. Moore, who outlined the duties of his office. That the local association of realtors was the liveliest in the state, not excepting Portland, was the statement made by the speaker.

"Every realtor should be familiar with each lot and tract in the district in which he operates," Mr. Moore said. "Not only should he be acquainted with the quality and valuation of farm and suburban tracts, but he should also know the valuation of city properties, buildings and furnishings." He predicted that the zoning problem would confront the city in the future and that it would demand the attention of the realtors.

"The Willamette valley challenges the world to find one of 50 products that cannot be matched or equalled here," declared John L. Brady. He urged the preservation of spiritual landmarks and of a Jason Lee Memorial homestead.

"The outside world does not dream of what we have out here," he continued, pointing out the quality of an almost endless variety of fruits, grains, vegetables, and livestock that can be produced in the Willamette valley. In 10 years the Willamette valley has risen to second to Wisconsin in its dairy products, he said, stressing the great number of gold medal dairy cows raised and the point that Willamette valley eggs command 2 cents a dozen over others in New York markets.

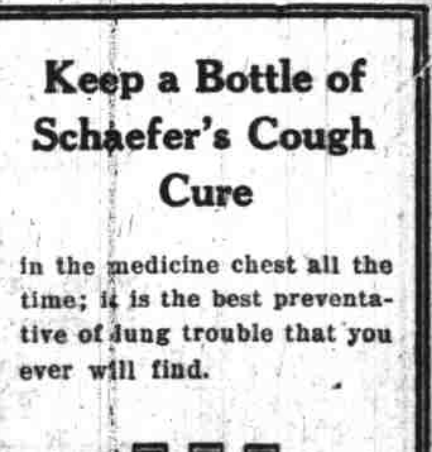

"There can be no other happy valley for the visitor after Oregon has once got into the blood," he declared in closing.
