

TRAFFIC MEN HAVE PARLEY

Better Understanding Arrived at by Three Pacific Coast States

The traffic departments of Oregon and California reached an agreement at a conference in Sacramento a few days ago whereby motor vehicle dealers in border towns may cross the line to solicit business, using dealers' licenses, but they will not be permitted to extend their activities beyond certain prescribed limits.

This was one of the arrangements made at a conference at Sacramento Thursday, Jan. 10, attended by superintendents of motor vehicle departments and traffic officials of Washington, Oregon and California. The conference was called primarily for the purpose of formulating reciprocal courtesies for citizens of the respective states traveling by automobile in either of the other two states. Will H. Marsh, chief of the California division of motor vehicles, presided.

Small Fee Appeals

Because of the small flat automobile license fee of $3 for all privately owned automobiles in California, it is expected there will be a tendency for a few residents of Oregon and Washington to license their cars in California and operate in their home states, if not apprehended by officers.

"To offset this possible evasion," says T. A. Raffety, chief traffic inspector for Oregon, "and also to protect their own citizens from loss in the purchase of stolen cars the California department will require residents of other states making application for California licenses to place on file with that department a surety bond equal to the value of the car before the license will be issued. In addition to this precaution the department will, upon receiving an application for license from a resident of Oregon or Washington refer such application to the authorities of the state from which the application was received for investigation to determine whether or not the applicant is attempting to evade the law of his home state. License in such instances will not be issued until the report on the investigation is received. This plan of investigation will be followed by the three states interested as a means of cooperation."

Roads Are Guarded

Washington state has established a patrol at the interstate bridge between Portland and Vancouver and other roads leading out of that state. This patrol will observe all vehicles using expired Washington licenses and will compel the owners of the vehicles to get proper licenses before crossing the border.

Traffic officers of the three states agreed to work in closer cooperation. Those who attended were Will H. Marsh, chief of the California division of motor vehicles; C. A. Harder, chief inspector of the division in California; L. D. McArdle, director of efficiency of the state of Washington; Fred J. Dibble, director of licenses of Washington; T. A. Raffety, chief of the Oregon traffic division; and Oren Leidy, chief inspector, Washington highway patrol.

LA ROCHE CAN'T COLLECT FEE

Portland Attorney May Have To Ask Legislature To Allow Claim

Apparently the only chances left W. P. LaRoche, Portland attorney, to get a fee for the part he played in the Wemme estate case are to place his claim before the next legislature or make a special appeal to the supreme court to make another change in the mandate whereby he would be allowed a fee.

Since the legislature is pretty hard to persuade in matters of this kind and since the supreme court in its new mandate in the case Monday held that Mr. LaRoche is not entitled to a fee from the estate, LaRoche's chances for a fee are apparently quite slender.

The mandate Monday said that all the fee LaRoche is entitled to is what may be paid him by the attorney general under statutory provision or what he may get by placing a claim before the legislature. But there is no appropriation whereby Attorney General Van Winkle can pay him, so that source is cut off.

LaRoche came to the attorney general voluntarily and asked to be allowed to represent the state in the case, declaring his belief that the state would be justified in having a representative among the attorneys. The contract that was entered into between him and Van Winkle provided that his fee would be whatever the court might allow him from the estate fund and that the state would be under no obligation to him.

LaRoche called Van Winkle by telephone yesterday and wanted enlightenment as to his chances and, it is understood, intimated that he might call on the members of the supreme court in his own behalf.

He isn't a real highbrow poet, however, unless he can make "vase" rhyme with "cause."

RODGERS TALKS ABOUT THRIFT

President of First National Deplores Speed, Splurge, Spending Era

"Speed, splurge and spending are the characteristics of this era of the three S's," declared George F. Rodgers, president of the First National bank, who spoke on "Thrift" at the Kiwanis club luncheon Tuesday. "Nervous complaints of today are the result of hysteria from the present day life and we are burning up our wealth and energy."

Big Wages Don't Help

"Thrift is not keeping pace with the era of the three S's," the speaker continued. "But it is going in the other direction. The mechanic who earns $9 a day at present is no better off than he was when he was earning $4 a day. The farmer is another man who is no better off, for though he has made money during the last two years he has spent more than at any other time in history."

In commenting upon the habit of borrowing, Mr. Rodgers said that while the land banks are good institutions they help to encourage over-borrowing and tend to make men slaves to necessity. He called attention to the many mortgages that have been placed in the hands of the bankers and others. Even the ex-service men are placed under obligation by obtaining loans from the state. Every community, county and state is busy in piling up debt, he said.

Thrift Appeals to Best

"Thrift appeals to the best in men and is a sound economic policy," Mr. Rodgers said. "Thrift does not mean to hoard but to spend wisely. Thrifty men are the most contented and have the consolation of spending their money for needed things that give creative employment to others. The thrifty man works for his pay and makes his money work for him. Thrift leads to independence and is reflected in communities."

That the tendency is toward a lack of imagination and that this is fast becoming sterile was pointed out with the illustration that moving pictures leave nothing for the imagination and after the show people go home to listen to a mechanical piano, a victrola or radio.

"Legs are fast becoming useless owing to the automobile," Mr. Rodgers said in closing. "Men are seeking new shrines of worship but seldom find them. Imagination is the father of fact and utility. Industry and time are the greatest factors of thrift and happiness is the greatest goal. The poor boy of today can look forward to the fact that 30 years from now he will have ample opportunity to be in a position of wealth or importance."

Anniversary Week Near

Attention was called to Anniversary week, January 21 to 26, which will be observed next Tuesday. Miss Marie Corner, actress, accompanied by Miss Ruth Bedford, sang two solos. Fred Erickson reported on the meeting of district trustees held in Seattle last week. Transfers of O. P. Coshaw, newly appointed justice of the Oregon supreme court, from Roseburg, and of Mr. Rakin, manager of the Standard Oil company, from The Dalles, were announced. The attendance prize, donated by G. Ed Ross, was won by F. C. Hannibal, of Portland, a guest at the luncheon.

BENCH WARRANTS ISSUED FOR TWO

J. W. South and Fay Cooper To Appear When Sentence Given

Bench warrants have been issued for J. W. South and Fay Cooper, who failed to appear yesterday for sentence following their conviction last week in circuit court on a charge of possession of liquor.

Judge Bingham, sitting for Judge Kelly, sentenced South to six months in jail and a fine of $500, while Mrs. Cooper was sentenced to four months in jail and to pay a fine of $500.

The ownership of the car which Mrs. Cooper and South were driving when they were arrested was decided in court yesterday when the former husband of Mrs. Cooper, H. S. Cooper, was awarded the title by a jury decision. Cooper came all the way from Arizona to claim the car which was valued by the jury at $200, and on which Mrs. Cooper had obtained a loan for $200 from Donald Miles, who was named as one of the defendants in the suit.

Mr. Miles, who was attorney for Mrs. Cooper and South when their case was tried last week, was deprived of the two witnesses who, next to the former husband of the woman, perhaps knew most about the car, and the only witness appearing was H. S. Cooper, who claimed the car and to whom the car was awarded by the jury.

The case of Mrs. Cooper and South was appealed from the justice court following the loss by the state of the first case, transportation of liquor.

HON. JOHN T. ADAMS
Chairman, Republican National Committee

The state of Iowa furnished the Republican national committee with its chairman, in the person of Mr. John T. Adams. At the time of his election, following the resignation of Hon. Will Hays, of Indiana, Mr. Adams was vice chairman of the committee, in which capacity he served during the last campaign. He is a prominent business man of Dubuque. Chairman Adams has devoted practically all of his time, during the past two years, to the affairs of the Republican party, putting into effect the principle that the national committee should always be active in behalf of the party.

At satisfactory speed, and many blocks of good size are being taken up by people around over the country.

In an interview with Mr. Kunkel, he said: "This sale of stock now on at par will no doubt be the last to appear on the market at such a price, on account of certain developments that have taken place in the past few days."

It is taken that this may mean an unusually rich strike, or that some plans have been arranged that will shorten very much the time between milling of ore and the paying of dividends, as it was previously outlined at the meeting of the board of directors 10 days ago. Mr. Kunkel was pressed to make further statements but he declined to make known more details. However, assurance was given that Lotz-Larsen is now on the map in the mining world, and that Santiam district is on the threshold of a great mining boom, the success of which seem positively certain.

Twelve men are now working at the property, and the ore deposits at the breast of the drift and back of the slope are opening up in a way that has everyone excited. The work going on at the present time is an enlargement process, making room for more men who will be going under ground within the next few days.

Mr. drills will soon be in operation and it is expected that before the month is past the mill will be running to full capacity, and concentrates will be piling up in the bins awaiting shipment.
