

CITY NEWS IN BRIEF

Cupid Is Felled— Clarence B. Carlson of Silverton sought a license at the clerk's office giving the name of his intended bride as Ella Samuelson, but ran against a snag insofar as getting a license was concerned when he told the deputy clerk, Ruth Wallace, that the bride-to-be lived in Canby. Miss Wallace advised him to seek the license in Clackamas county, since it was the home county of the bride-elect, and the Oregon law provides that the marriage license must be issued in the bride's home county. Having been thus discouraged, Cupid sent Miss Wallace no more applicants for licenses yesterday.

Doc Epley Finds Pair That are Bigger Than He

So used to looking down upon people from his 6 feet 4 inches is Dr. H. C. Epley, that whenever he sees a man taller than he, there comes an irresistible impulse to rush up and get acquainted. Such was his experience yesterday when he saw not one, but two, of these men.

"Hello, neighbor, where did you come from?" he exclaimed, looking up into the eyes that towered above him by a full four inches. "Iowa," came the reply. The stranger introduces his cousin, a mere infant, only 6 feet, 6 1/2 inches tall. Comparison of weights followed, with honors even. Both "Doc" and the first stranger tipped the scales at 330. He told of another brother, headed toward Oregon, that was over seven feet and weighed 125 pounds more. Looking at the specimens before him, Dr. Epley agreed that it was possible.

"Doc" was tickled all over—which a some tickle—to meet two men larger than he is. He took the strangers around town, introducing them to many of the business men.

"I felt like a Shetland pony between two draft horses," Dr. Epley confessed. "It was some experience."

Comment upon appearance of the trio followed them. "Doc" looks like a consumptive," Frank Myers declared. "Reminds me of a peanut," said William McGilchrist. Anyhow, Dr. Epley was made happy by the event.

R. T. Kaufman of Marshfield arrived in the city yesterday. He is a guest of the Marion hotel.

Attorney Fred A. Williams was called to McMinnville yesterday to represent a client in the Yamhill county courts. He is expected back today.

Dr. A. C. Wrightman of Silverton was a Salem visitor Thursday. John Carson, district attorney, was an Oregon City visitor yesterday. He was accompanied by Mrs. Carson.

Nelson Kloster of Barlow was in the city recently. James E. Stevens was in Salem yesterday from Eugene. Mike Konidari of Marshfield was in Salem Thursday.
