LIBERTY—Cup of Life.
OREGON—The Eyes of the Forest.

BLIGH—High Speed Lee.
"High Speed Lee," the photodramatization of J. P. Marquard's story, "Only a Few of Us Left," which was published originally in the Saturday Evening Post, comes to the Bligh today, bringing with it a new screen celebrity in the person of Reed Howes, a gifted juvenile, for whom a brilliant screen career has been predicted. His work is reminiscent of that done by Douglas Fairbanks when that talented gentleman first made his bow to motion picture patrons. Norma Talmadge in "The Song of Love," will be the next big feature at the Oregon theater, opening Friday night and continuing through the week-end.

"Cameo Kirby" had its final showing at that theater last night and this afternoon "The Eyes of the Forest," with Tom Mix in the lead, will take its place. This film will show at the Oregon only during the afternoon and evening of today and tomorrow afternoon. It will then be shifted over to the Grand for the Friday night, Saturday and Sunday shows.

In that Miss Talmadge appears in an entirely new role, that of a Ouled Nail dancing girl, the coming picture at the Oregon promises to be popular among the scores of friends this star has made among Salem theater fans. The scene of the play is laid in Northern Africa and the story is woven out of the plots and counter plots that are hatched among the warring tribes of that region as part of their daily routine.

Not the least fascinating element of the film by any means is the dancing of Miss Talmadge. Preparing for these scenes from star took weeks of lessons from imported Arabian instructors in Los Angeles as did the two European and two American girls who accompany her in the more intricate of the dances.

GUESTS INVITED

Two Boys and Two Girls Apprehended By Officers

Two youthful shiks and their amora appeared before the juvenile court yesterday with the result that one of the lads spent the night in the county jail, one of the girls was sent to the girls' school and the other two were released under custody of their parents, to appear before County Judge Downing Friday morning. The girls were 14 and 16 years old and the boys 14 and 15 years old.

The father of one of the girls is said to be more than 80 years old. She had no company of her own age and the parent was much too old to be a companion. As a result she and a girl friend would slip away from home early in the evening to return early in the morning. The mother of the other girl admitted that she knew the girl was doing wrong but that the girl would refuse to explain her absence from home. The mother claimed that the girl was unruly and she was not able to handle her.

Before being rounded up and brought before the county judge, the quartet had established a veritable love nest in a vacant house at the outskirts of the city. They spent a great portion of three nights there before being apprehended.

DONEY ADDRESSES ROTARY CLUBMEN

Value of Willamette University to City of Salem Told By President

"The Significance of Willamette University to Salem" was the keynote of a short talk to the Rotary club at the Wednesday luncheon by President Carl Gregg Doney of the university, who presided as chairman of the day, designated as "Willamette day." There are two outstanding features, he said, the financial and intangible assets. The quality of any institution is worked out through the community, he said, and Willamette university has been quietly influencing the city for the last few generations.

Some idea of the financial side was given by President Doney by quoting figures compiled by Mr. Savage, business secretary. The total budget for 1922-23 was $127,103.25. Student receipts were $43,141.30; $59,563.99 were received through the endowment interest; $24,370.25 from Lausanne hall receipts, and $2,337.70 from miscellaneous sources. The budget for 1922-23 was a little under that of the previous year and $122,000 was given as the approximate amount. This year it is expected it will reach $140,000 based upon return of $71,851 for the first semester.

Emphasizing the point that only a small percentage of the money is spent outside of Salem, chiefly for particular supplies, President Doney said the total payroll of $70,000 was spent here; that the 500 students will spend on an average of $20 a month or $150,000 for the year, and including individual expenditures would probably bring this amount to $175,000. With the expenditure of the institution the total amount was given close to $300,000, including $6420 in scholarships. The institution had an enrollment of 588 students at the end of the first semester.

Early days in Willamette university were described by Prof. J. T. Matthews, who entered the institution in 1883, from which he was graduated in 1889. At that time there were five professors and two instructors on the faculty, with nine seniors and 31 students. He contrasted these figures with those of last year when 74 seniors were enrolled in the college of law. After being out of school for four years Professor Matthews returned as an instructor and has been connected with the institution ever since.

Three disasters visited Willamette during this four-year absence. Professor Matthews said. First was a split in the conference and the organization of a rival institution in Portland, which claimed about half the students; second was a fire, and third the president was a man not fitted to his work and antagonized the students, many of whom left.

Professors received $1,000 a year, with $1200 being paid the president. Professor Matthews said. Later this was cut to $800, and one year he received only $450. Later the indebtedness was wiped out and an advance, "steady by jerks" began, one of the great-endowment campaign a little over a year ago.

Fumigation Calls Out Silvertown Department

SILVERTON, Ore., Jan. 30.—(Special to The Statesman).—One would imagine that contagious disease was a rarity at Silvertown from the fact that fumigation calls out the fire department. Monday evening the Silvertown fire department responded to a call of fire from the Masonic building. Upon arriving the department discovered that the alarm had as its source the fumigation of Attorney Custer Ross's office. Mr. Ross, although aware that he was not feeling well, did not realize what disease he was harboring so attended necessary work at the office. A few days later it was discovered he was a victim of scarlet fever. The offices have been fumigated and Mr. Ross is confined to his home which is under quarantine.
