Moore soon thraw a field goal for the teachers and from then on the Cheney school led the game except for an instant in the first half when the score stood 8 to 9 in favor of Willamette. KING COTTON is high. Supplies are low. The world needs 12,000,--add about 2,087,919 hales of old supply and that makes next year's carry-over the smallest on record. With economists predicting a world crop this year of 2,000,000 bales less than the average consumption during the last two years, there's not much chance for a slump in prices, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural foundation. Looks like the market would hug right around 30 cents for the most of the 1923

Cotton goods are bringing three times pre-war prices now. But, regardless of the price, the consumption is almost back on a pre-war basis-21,000,000 bales a year. We don't produce that much now-not the whole world put together. Estimated world production for 1923, based on reports for the principal producing countries, will range around 17,700,000 bales.

For three years cotton crops have been coming short, in spite of favorable seasons and increased acreage. The boll weevil is taking its toll. The days of big cotton crops in the United States are numbered until some means of combating the weevil can be applied on a large scale. It is probable that the normal cotton crop under present conditions is about 30 per cent less than in pre-weevil days. As the United States furnishes two-thirds of all the world's cotton supply, continued shortage of the domestic yield will keep world prices high,

The potential cotton area is around 40,000,000 acres. Of this amount about 20,000,000 acres are situated in regions climatically unfavorable to weevil development. Here the loss is light. Farmers of this area are making handsome profits. But the farmers who plant the remaining 20,000,000 acres see little profit in the upward rise of the market.

Why not send a copy of this big paper to your friends?

Think it over. If you were to receive from som e of your friends a great big edition of that friend's home town paper and it was filled with facts from cover to cover, wouldn't it make an impression on you? It certainly would, and if you were intending to make a change in the location of your home or business, that very edition would probably sell you the idea that there was the place to go. Exactly so; and last year's edition of the Statesman brought several families to the Willamette valley. Some are in business and all are good, clean, prosperous folks, and we're glad they came. We need new people all the while, to keep us old timers from getting into the proverbial "rut" and slumping.
