THEY APPRECIATE THE GOOD WORK

Editor Oregon Statesman, Salem, Oregon—Dear Sir: I received through the courtesy of Mr. C. A. Kells, General Secretary, Young Men's Christian Association, Salem, Oregon, a copy of the issue of the Oregon Statesman giving an account of and commenting editorially upon the work of that organization in its Americanization work, with particular reference to teaching applicants for citizenship the fundamentals of American government, and I am writing to express my appreciation and that of the Bureau of Naturalization for the publicity you have given this work.

The Bureau of Naturalization is highly pleased at the good work being done at Salem by the court, school officials, the Y. M. C. A., and other patriotic organizations on behalf of good citizenship, and we are especially pleased that your publication has given it publicity and is giving that work encouragement. I hope that you will in every way possible cooperate with these various organizations in this good work. Again thanking you, I am, very sincerely yours,

J. NO. SPEED SMITH, Chief Naturalization Examiner.

The above letter, from the U. S. Department of Labor, Naturalization Service, office of Chief Examiner, Room 404 Federal Building, Seattle, Washington, will no doubt be appreciated by the people and officials to whom Mr. Smith refers—and they deserve the words of commendation.

The Statesman is glad to be the instrument of carrying this kind of a message and conveying this kind of information.

The next examination of applicants for citizenship papers and privileges will be held in the court of Judge G. G. Bingham on March third; the date having been extended from February 6, which was a holiday, on account of the funeral of Ex-President Woodrow Wilson.

At the coming examination there will be a class of twelve from the Salem Y. M. C. A. The satisfactory results of the splendid work being done in these classes was described, as many readers will remember, in the issue of The Statesman to which Mr. Smith refers.

PROTECTION FOR IRELAND

There is in Ireland a party advocating protective duties in favor of Irish laborers and manufacturers and producers and capital.

And a well posted Irish statesman predicts that this sentiment will become overwhelming, and lead soon to the enactment of a protective tariff law for that country.

Wages are higher in Ireland than in England, and the Irish Free State, in a population of only 3,000,000, requires an army of 30,000 for the maintenance of order; which is a heavy burden.

So the revenues that will come from a protective tariff are needed in Ireland; besides tariff rates that will keep her laborers employed at living wages and her manufacturing concerns going on full time and on solid footings; and give the producers of her raw materials a chance to maintain themselves.

This will give free trade England a jolt— But it will be nothing more than all other British colonies are now doing. Every one of them is collecting protective duties.

And besides Ireland sees that there is a good deal of propaganda and camouflage about English free trade; for under the British "safeguarding of industries" act of 1921, English free trade has a superstructure of protection imposed on it—the duties producing a handsome revenue; 6,000,000 pounds for a short period of this year, against less than 2,000,000 pounds for the same period of last year.

But the Irish see that this advantage to the English treasury does their own treasury no good; and the duties, devised for the protection of English capital and industry and labor, do harm rather than good to Irish capital and industry and labor.

So, seeing the advantages of protection in other British colonies, and in the United States and other countries, the Irish people are preparing to go onto a basis of protection—for the sake of both protection and revenue.

LOOKING AROUND

It is good for Salem citizens to look around. Judge D'Arcy told The Statesman recently that he went to California every winter for several winters, and then he began to make comparisons. He says now he will never go again except for the purpose of short recreation. There are a good many cases similar to the judge's. We do not get awakened to our own possibilities. We picture some gigantic fairy land where all is peace and joy, but as we enmesh ourselves in this fairy land we find it is "lath painted to resemble iron." The first thing for any citizen to do when he gets away from home is to make values; to begin a compilation of facts as a foundation for the opinion that the Willamette valley is by far the most desirable place in the world in which to live. This is no disparagement of other places, but we have a most forward moving, prosperous community, but the citizens living here cannot note the gradual changing conditions around them.

The place to begin is in the neighborhood in which one resides. Count accurately the new homes, note the grading of the streets, the laying of sidewalks, the paving of streets. This same story is being duplicated all over Salem. It is not extraordinary in any part of the city.

over $100,000,000. The facts uncovered in the residential section are equally applicable to every commercial interest. To offset the new residences, industry has a larger scope as well. There is an entry of new and vigorous blood into the heart of Salem. It is a great privilege to live in Salem, and we must go away from home to find it out.

A PROTEST

The Oregon Statesman is in possession of a protest against its levity in handling the sad predicament of W. G. McAdoo. The protest is signed by Bill Sinclair, who declares that he is a resident of Waldo Hills and he objects to what he thinks is handling W. G. McAdoo trivialously. "I am a good democrat and I am going to stand by my own. You say McAdoo burned his britches. Were they not his own, or did he not have a right to burn them? Certainly, you will conceive that the man had sense enough to take them off before burning, especially as you say they were saturated with oil. I claim that the britches were his own, and it is nobody's business if he did burn them. He was acting in his own rights as a free American citizen.

"Why this narrow bigotry? I will have to have an act from the legislature before I burn my old britches. I want you to also no-hind him. You do not seem to catch the point. It certainly means that he took them off, put them in a pile behind him and casually dropped a match on them. I see no warrant for saying that he simply burned the seat off; he burned the whole blamed shebang, but I contend that he was acting entirely within his rights. I hope the Oregon Statesman will publish this letter as conspicuously as it published the recent attack on McAdoo's britches. We must depend upon the press for publicity and the press must be fair even in handling the britches of a democratic presidential candidate, and further this candidate saith not."

CIVIC ENERGY

The Oregon Statesman is very much delighted with the organization of the Women's Civic Club. Under the fine leadership of Mrs. Cartwright the club will outline a program of service and will expend its energies in helping improve Salem as a city. There is a lot that can be done. We must present a good appearance when the tide of visitors begins its annual flow along the Pacific highway. The tourist who stops in Salem must be made to feel that he has reached the end of the trail and might as well throw in his lot with our enterprising citizens. The new civic club will use its leadership in conjunction with the other clubs of Salem in voluntarily assuming its share of the necessary responsibilities for desired betterments. Salem is to be congratulated upon the new impetus given by the organization of this new Women's Civic Club. We must not permit our neighbors to outstrip us in the matter of clean streets, well kept yards, or freshly painted homes and business buildings. Especially at this time is there activity in the beautifying of the city by tree planting. The possibilities of this is almost unlimited. We not only welcome the new club, but we congratulate Salem on this new form of service.

A GHOUL

The ghoul is the most despicable of all animals. It goes about where the dead are buried, digging them up to mutilate their bodies. There are human ghouls, men who try to enter the graveyard and attempt to tear to pieces the memory of dead men. A man named Vanderlip, who has been honored by America, has descended so low as to enter the grave of Harding and seek to tear his reputation to pieces. Then he calmly admitted he spoke from heresy, which shows that he does not appreciate his own degradation. In the annals of America there is no man who has performed worse than Vanderlip. He ought to be honorable, yet without pretending to suspicion any facts he attempts to defile the reputation of a man honored by the American people. It is a situation that calls for drastic action. Vanderlip should be denounced as the cruel, malicious thing that he is, and held up to the scorn of all men as a human ghoul, who is simply exercising his natural depravity.

LET'S ADVERTISE

A. S. Dudley of the state chamber of commerce, declares that the northwest will spend $5,000,000 for advertising purposes this year. He includes in this, of course, the advertising by the railroads whose headquarters are away from here, but whose money is spent to bring people to the northwest. People have just found out what the northwest contains. They came here in great numbers last year, Oregon's quota being 400,000 tourists. This year there will be twice that many. It is highly important that every dollar work in harmony with every other dollar. The day of individual pulling is over; the day of united team work is at hand. We will have a large number of tourists this year and the northwest will come into its own.

ANOTHER NEWBERRY

Is Michigan again to furnish a Newberry case? Denby is not the type of man Newberry was, but if Denby continues in the cabinet it would amount to the same thing as if Newberry continued in the senate. Newberry went on until he damaged his party incalculably. He only resigned when face to face with expulsion by the senate. Denby is holding on in the face of hostile public sentiment, and every day is adding fuel to the democratic fires, that unless checked will consume the republican party in the next election.

A FAMILIAR SOUND

Mr. McAdoo has called a number of friends to Chicago, doubtless at his own expense, for the purpose of passing upon his candidacy in the light of the oil discovery. You do not seem to catch the point. It certainly means that he took them off, put them in a pile behind him and casually dropped a match on them. I see no warrant for saying that he simply burned the seat off; he burned the whole blamed shebang, but I contend that he was acting entirely within his rights. I hope the Oregon Statesman will publish this letter as conspicuously as it published the recent attack on McAdoo's britches. We must depend upon the press for publicity and the press must be fair even in handling the britches of a democratic presidential candidate, and further this candidate saith not."

WALSH IS ANGRY

Senator Walsh, who is purporting to be conducting a straight investigation, is very angry because his friend, McAdoo, was exposed. Senator Walsh is wrong. He should be mighty thankful. Suppose this case had come up in the middle of the campaign, as it must have come up, it would not only have blown up the candidate, but his party as well, as it is only the candidate is blown up.

BULLETS FLY DURING ARREST

Prohibition Commissioner Tells of Adventure in Portland Sunday

George L. Cleaver, state prohibition commissioner, while here yesterday told of an arrest near Portland last Sunday night in which guns came into play.

Early Sunday night Cleaver was informed by some of his agents that a booze runner's car was expected to pass Twelfth and Hawthorne streets, Portland about 8 o'clock. The agents had the number of the car. Cleaver joined his agents and the car went by as scheduled. Cleaver and his men followed in an automobile and in the Sellwood district noticed that another car was following the runner.

Cleaver intercepted the runner in a dark street near the Waverly golf links. He submitted to arrest without protest, but the driver of the following car leaped out and fled. Several shots were fired by the prohibition agents, and it is believed by the fleeing man, who made good his escape. It was found that he was to receive the liquor from the runner.

The driver of the booze car gave his name as Frank Bishop, which evidently is an alias, since he had difficulty in spelling it at the police station. Bishop was placed under $500 bonds in Portland, but it was found the arrest took place across the Clackamas county line and the case was transferred to Oregon City. At a scheduled preliminary hearing Bishop and his attorney failed to appear and the money was forfeited.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Very appropriate—

That the junior high school building, work upon which will soon begin, should be called the J. L. Parrish school.

In all the history of Salem, up to around the first years of the present century, Rev. J. L. Parrish was a commanding figure here—a big man physically and mentally. He drove the first spike of Salem's first street railway with an axe that he brought with him "around the Horn" with the early Methodist missionaries. The first street railway ran from Commercial and State streets to the Southern Pacific passenger depot. It was run with horses and mules. There was not at that time an electric street railway in the world. That was in the early nineties.

The flax growing contracts will no doubt be ready to sign soon after Robert Crawford, superintendent of the state flax plant, gets home from California; in a few days.

The Slogan man always finds men making a success in every Slogan line. Some one asks why the Slogan man does not mention the failures. Because there would be no lesson in this; no encouragement. The thing is to bring every Slogan line up to the standard of the successes. What one man has done, others can do.

An old Salem man wants to call your attention to the fact that the oil scandals have not touched Herbert Hoover, the Salem boy. And they will not. He is as "clean as a hound's tooth." He was the same when he was a boy in Salem.

The Women's Y campaign is going fine. Two more days to go. Going "over the top." The Women's Y in Salem is going to have a building of its own, one of these days.

The Statesman's Annual, work on which has lagged, is being hurried to a finish now. Will be out very soon.

ZEROLENE for FORDS

PUTS OIL where oil is needed

Any Ford mechanic will tell you that the points in the Ford engine which are ordinarily the first to suffer from lack of proper lubrication are the wrist pin bearings (here illustrated) and the upper part of the cylinder walls.

Excellent though the Ford splash system is, if a heavy or otherwise unsuitable oil is used, it does not get to these relatively more inaccessible bearings and trouble results.

Zerolene "F" for Fords, the new oil developed by our research engineers after years of study and experiment, has the right body and the right crawling and adhesive qualities which enable it to reach every point in the Ford motor requiring lubrication. It will improve the power and gasoline mileage, reduce upkeep costs and lengthen the life of every Ford in which it is used. And it costs not more but less than most of the special Ford oils now on the market.
