Ex-Stanford Star and Olympic Prospect Coaches Cinder Athletes

First call to the cinder track brought out 50 men at the Salem high school yesterday afternoon.

Salem should put a good team in the field this year despite the weakness of the team last year and the fact there are no lettermen, all of these having been lost through graduation.

Arios Hayes, ex-Stanford track star, and who is now getting himself in condition for the tryouts for the Olympic games, has taken charge of the track men this spring.

There are at present approximately 500 boys in high school, and with this quantity of possible material, Coach Hayes is confident that he will be able to discover considerable talent and ability among the students.
