

THEATRES MOVIES

In "The Eternal Three," which was yesterday's offering at the Grand theater, and goes over to the Grand today to remain until Sunday night, Marshall Neilan has surpassed even the most remarkable of his previous productions. In theme the film glorifies the work of the self-sacrificing physician and surgeon, and is a relief from the common run of pictures these days.

Neilan has made a thrilling story around this problem and it is superbly acted by Hobart Bosworth, Claire Windsor and Raymond Griffith as the members of the eternal triangle, and by Alec Francis, Bessie Love, Tom Gallery, George Cooper, William Norris, Helen Lynch, Victory Bateman, Lillian Leighton, Peaches Jackson, and the other members of the cast. This is a Neilan picture that will make you thrill and think and tingle.

Another picture which selects a particular vocation to honor for the sacrifices that are made in its demands is "Capit's Fireman," which is the offering at the Liberty today. Commencing with a special showing in New York before high fire department officials, this film has been accorded extravagant praise throughout the country, and those who saw it at the Liberty yesterday declare it to be deserving of all the tributes that have been paid it. Jones and Marian Nixon are the stars. To round out the bill today the Liberty is also offering a special two-reel picture, "The Oregon Trail," which in a smaller way is as remarkable in its picturization of pioneer days in the west as is "The Covered Wagon."

BRIDGE ENGINEER ADDRESSES LIONS

O. B. McCullough Talks on Organization at Noon-day Luncheon

Impressions of the fundamental principles of building as applied to organization were outlined by C. B. McCullough, bridge engineer of the state highway department, at the Friday luncheon of the Lions club.

"An organization is like a building in that it is dependant upon its foundation," Mr. McCullough said. "Each building must have four cornerstones and each organization must have four principles upon which it rests if it is to endure. These principles are service, loyalty, fidelity and love."

"Service is the fundamental principle upon which an organization is founded," the speaker continued. "An organization will rise or fall in proportion to its being built upon this foundation. My greatest pride in my department is the fact that all of the 450 engineers throughout the state are all working harmoniously."

Loyalty is necessary for the continuance of the organization. This is a part of manhood and good citizenship. If you cannot be loyal to your immediate superior you should quit your position.

Fidelity and love were also touched upon by Mr. McCullough, who said that the latter gives sympathy and should be cultivated, always instilling the feeling of good fellowship and understanding.

In speaking of his profession he said it differed from others, in that while the doctor might be able to bury his mistakes and the lawyer reverse his, the mistakes of an engineer stand out for public inspection. In closing Mr. McCullough urged that more time be devoted in building the morale of an organization around the four cornerstones.

At Krause presided as chairman of the day.

Oregon State News

Timber Cutting Large

The annual report of the forest service on sales of timber in Oregon and Washington for the calendar year 1923 shows that 1,768,446,000 feet board measure were sold during that period, according to figures given out at the office of the Cascade national forest yesterday. This is an increase of more than 7,000,000 feet over the amount sold during any other year.

The amount of timber cut on the national forests of these two states during the year was 359,176,000, an increase of 86,000,000 over the previous high cut, the report states. The total value of the timber sold during the year was $4,456,000.

The counties in which this timber is located receive 25 per cent of all sales as the money is paid, to be applied to road work, and 10 per cent of the amount received is turned back for the construction of roads and trails in or near the forest from which the timber was taken. Besides this, 10 per cent of the sale go for forest road building under the so-called federal aid section 8 appropriation, making approximately a total of 45 per cent of the sales money that is turned back for the benefit of the local communities.

After Clear Lake Water

ALBANY, Feb. 23.—Preliminary work in all phases of plan to make a survey of the feasibility of the Clear Lake water project is taking form and making progress according to Waldo Anderson, president of the organization recently formulated to make the survey.

Mr. Anderson and A. M. Hamner returned last evening from Salem where they had been again to confer with State Engineer Rhea Luper, who is completing his regular work at Bend and in other sections of the state before taking up the Clear Lake Survey, which is to begin in the near future. Mr. Anderson says that the finance committee will perhaps formulate plans at once to raise $3,000 to match a like amount from the state to make the survey.

L. E. Hamilton of Albany is chairman of the committee on finance. Several plans have been proposed, it is said to raise the money. The pro-rata plan according to population may be followed, or an appeal may be made to the city council of the towns interested to pledge the money as it is regarded as a municipal proposition which should be supported equally by the taxpayers.

Albany's probable share is estimated at from $100 to $500.

IS IT TRUE?

"Over one half of our school children will cheat and lie and steal"

READ THIS

A recent series of tests covering three years, costing $100,000, show that a "great majority" of boys and girls say:

- THAT "It is not wrong to steal from one who has secured his wealth dishonestly."
- THAT "Stupidity is a greater sin than deceit."
- THAT "Cheating a railroad is NOT so much a sin as cheating a person."
- THAT "If a storekeeper gives you too much it is all right to keep it because he would probably do the same if you paid him too much."
