Washing Machine those moving parts seen on other machines. Because of this the AUTOMATIC is NEATER, STRONGER and has a greater capacity because the sides of the tub are perpendicular instead of sloping.

IT DRAINS AUTOMATICALLY

Besides being attached to the tub in a slanting position, the copper bottom has seven drain grooves which lead to a depression near the outlet. Thus the AUTOMATIC tub drains automatically without tilting and consequently the tub can be attached rigidly to the frame.

choed and re-echoed throughout the first half as the spectators were kept to the highest pitch of excitement while both teams were struggling to get ahead.

With the opening of the second half the game was bitterly contested. LaFave and Hummel covered the Mill City forwards so well that the latter were rendered helpless.

Greater physical strength and better team work counted for the Mill City girls' victory over the deaf school girls' team earlier in the evening, 30 to 9. A return game will be played at Mill City March 14.

AGGIES REQUEST MONTANA GAME

OAC Asks Permission to Play Game With U. of M. to Even Score

LOS ANGELES, March 1.—Oregon Agricultural college tonight asked the Pacific coast intercollegiate athletic conference through its president William R. Laporte, University of Southern California, for permission to play the University of Montana basketball team, and a telegraphic vote of conference members is being taken tonight.

The request followed closely today's decision by the conference to count Montana's games in the standings of the teams of the northern section.

Following a request by Oregon Agricultural college for a decision, President Laporte ruled Montana ineligible on two counts, because the team had entered the conference after the schedule had been drawn up and because it has played only 60 per cent of the northern section teams.

The University of Washington protested, and a vote was taken with the result that Montana today was ruled eligible.

BASKET TOURNEY IS APPROACHING

Committees of Willamette Student Body Getting Ready for Event

Contemplating the attendance of more than 100 players and some 400 to 500 visiting fans, six committees from the student body are at work preparing for the state high school basketball tournament to be held here March 13, 14, and 15 under the auspices of Willamette university.

The tournament will be played in the new Willamette gymnasium which has a seating capacity of 1500 spectators. The visiting high school guests will be entertained at the Willamette fraternity houses and at local hotels.

It is yet too early to pick the nine competing teams, as in some districts the championship will not be decided until this week.

IS CANDIDATE TO SUCCEED HIMSELF

MARTEN POULSEN

Marten Poulsen, who is a candidate to succeed himself as city recorder, has been a resident of Salem since 1905.

On January 1, 1914, Mr. Poulsen entered the employ of the Hauser Brothers as bookkeeper, remaining there until January 1, 1918 when he went into the tax collection department of the sheriff's office.

The six were taken to the police station and Marten Poulsen, police judge, called at 1 o'clock to fix bail. This was set at $25 each for the men and $10 each for the women.

The defendants claimed to be ignorant of violation of any ordinance; they testified that they were with a crew of magazine solicitors visiting the Salem district. It was customary each night for them to report to the manager of the crew or his wife, who had charge of the women members.

After the prizefights Friday they went back to the hotel and when the men came to the room in which the women were at the time, they were invited to a game of "rummy." This, they testified, was customary, as they were on the road all the time, and could see no harm in an innocent game of cards.

Willamette university was the first college institution to hold a high school tournament for this state. It was begun under Coach H. L. Mathews in 1917.

In 1920 the first all-state tournament was staged. Twelve leading teams from every part of the state competed. Winners of former tournaments were Roseburg, 1917; Salem, 1918 and 1919 and 1920; Franklin high school of Portland, 1921; Ashland 1922; and the University high school of Eugene, 1923.

Dr. Russell was lying on the floor of one room and his wife in the bed in another room. Mrs. Russell is said to have left a note stating they had decided to end it all and die together.

Dr. Russell has been an inmate of the state hospital for treatment due to his alleged indulgence to narcotics, which caused several trips to the institution. He was recommitted to the hospital yesterday while his wife was taken in charge by her parents, who live in Silverton.

At the hospital yesterday Dr. Russell told attendants that his wife had frequently talked of taking her life and that he had attempted to frighten her out of these thoughts by giving her something that would make her real sick.

CARD PLAYERS ARE NOT GUILTY

Six Arrested for Playing Rummy in Hotel Room are Turned Loose

Dismal failure followed the first arrests under the much-discussed anti-gambling ordinance recently passed by the city council when three young women and three young men were found "not guilty" in the police court late Saturday after hours had been spent in trying the case.

The six people were arrested Friday night in a local hotel by Officers Olson and Wright. The officers entered the room and did not make their authority known, according to the testimony. They admitted having no difficulty in entering the room.

As the door was locked, City Attorney Ray L. Smith, assisted by Chris Kowitz, assistant city attorney attempted to prove that the complaint covered the situation. The complaint charged that "cards were exposed in a room occupied by two or more persons and that they were playing behind a barricaded door, making it difficult for a police officer to enter."

Both the officers and the defendants testified that when the night clerk of the hotel knocked on the door, without even telling who it was, the door was opened immediately by one of the young men. "Rummy" was the game that caused the rumpus.

The six were taken to the police station and Marten Poulsen, police judge, called at 1 o'clock to fix bail. This was set at $25 each for the men and $10 each for the women.

The defendants claimed to be ignorant of violation of any ordinance; they testified that they were with a crew of magazine solicitors visiting the Salem district. It was customary each night for them to report to the manager of the crew or his wife, who had charge of the women members.

CREW COACH GONE BUT STROKE STAYS

SEATTLE, Wash., Mar. 1.—From racing with bicycles, and not with boats, came a rowing principle that is to permeate the practice of the crews that uphold next summer the fame of Yale and Harvard and the Universities of Washington and California.

The crews of these four institutions will be partly or entirely trained by graduates of a system of rowing invented by Hiram Conibear, who died six years ago.

Conibear never pulled an oar. He was a bicycle racer, and from that got to be an athletic trainer. He became associated with the University of Washington as track coach. An idea kept running in his head, gained from his bicycle experience, that the leg was a more powerful engine than the arm.

When in an emergency a crew coach was needed at Washington, he volunteered. Ultimate success was the result.

Followers of Washington crews believe that the "Conibear stroke" will replace the English stroke in this country, by employing the power of the leg in a slow movement. Conibear to reverse the labored use of the arms, which was the vogue when he entered aquatics.

In Conibear's regime at Washington he won most of his races. In 1913 he took the Washington crew to the national intercollegiate regatta at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and placed third, being nosed out by Syracuse and Cornell universities.

After the world war Ed Leader, a veteran of the 1913 and 1916 Washington eights, took the helm which death had wrenched from the hand of Conibear. Under Leader, Washington continued to advance. After defeating California and Wisconsin in the spring of 1922, the Washington boat was beaten only by a great eight of the United States naval academy in the Poughkeepsie race. Then Yale took Leader for its head coach and with him as assistant Captain Mike Murphy, stroke in the 1921 and 1922 Washington shells.

Forbes declared he had "great sympathy," however, for J. W. Thompson, one of those indicted, "because I believe he is as completely innocent as myself." He said his acquaintance with Thompson was slight and "purely social," as he had been introduced to him in the veterans' bureau by Mrs. Carolina Votaw, sister of the late President Harding.

"Knowing the utter falsity of Mortimer's story concerning any conspiracy or other improper conduct between Mr. Thompson and myself," Forbes asserted, "I am convinced that his testimony relating to transactions between him and Thompson, of which I have no personal knowledge are equally false."

Alluding to his administration of hospital construction, Forbes declared: "If I were crooked, or dishonest, would I seek to locate hospitals on government property when the law gave me the right to choose the ground? Would I have turned over the construction to the army and navy to whom I gave entire jurisdiction, control and authority?"

He added he believed both the army and navy had the "finest engineering organization in the United States."

In this connection, however, he asserted, he proposed to name "at the proper time every individual who has been to see me and the influences they brought to bear upon me in connection with hospital construction."

"I don't care where it hits," he added, emphatically.
