Long With Poor Equipment

Wives of Farmers Labor

Geo. W. Mossit and wife, lot 14,

DURHAM, N. H., March 15 .-The suggestion that farm women spend more time in the making of pies, cakes, and cookies than their food value justifies, is made by workers of the state farm extension service. These workers, with the aid of charts kept by representative farmers' wives, have figured that the average farm woman in this state performs nearly 4000 hours of labor a year, in effect giving her an 11 hour day, including Sundays and holidays. The extension workers are trying to work out some means of reducing this burden. A campaign for better food selection is being made, in view of the fact that the charts show an average of four hours spent a day in food preparation. The inconvenient arrangement of kitchens and poor equipment is found to be a important factor in the situation.

The time spent on sewing, the workers say, can be reduced by ducation in equipment and methods. Better washing equipment fill help in laundry work.

The extension service heard o farmer who was forced to do he fam'ly washing because his ife was ill. She had done her laundry work for 27 years with inadequate equipment, but at the end of two weeks the farmer bought a washing machine.
