THE BOOSTER SPIRIT

The Salem Lions went in force to Eugene, to help in the ceremonies and festivities of delivering its charter to a new Lions club there on Wednesday evening...

Every city has a steady Booster To talk about her— That city's always pretty, Always busy;

The above boosting paragraphs for our youngest noontime luncheon club of boosting Salemites is not written in a boastful spirit— But because it is worthy of remark that the Salem civic organizations and Salem individuals generally have been improving immensely of late in fostering the spirit of selling Salem to Salemites and Oregon to Oregonians...

It means a bigger and better Salem and a bigger and better Oregon. It means growth and development. It is the spirit that enables Los Angeles to boast 1,148,121 inhabitants up to last Saturday—

With 3876 real estate dealers; and about these real estate dealers, the Los Angeles Times said, the other day, that business is made very easy for them, in this way: "Practically every man who has a home or a bit of property is absolutely certain that he has about the finest location that ever existed."

If Salem can catch that spirit, and have it "take" with the virulence that prevails at Los Angeles, we will have 100,000 people here as fast as we can build houses to accommodate them—

DEFENDING THE CONSTITUTION

Judge Chadwick, president of the Washington State Bar association, made this lament: "It is a sad commentary that, after 150 years of national existence under a system of government that has guaranteed personal liberty, inspired men to their highest aspirations and, when tested by time and accomplishment, ought to be acclaimed by all men—we should be put to the necessity of a call for a concerted movement to preserve and defend the constitution."

It is sad but true that such a condition exists. Americans know very little about the constitution. Most of them have not read it. They have been living under it as a matter of course, but they

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adelle Garrison's New Phase of REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

Copyright 1921, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. CHAPTER 131 WHO IS THIS STRIKING MAN MADGE MET SO STRANGELY?

For two seconds, which seemed to me as many hours, after I had climbed into the seat beside Dicky, he stared straight ahead over the wheel with no sign that he had understood the meaning of my little ruse.

Had I been mistaken, after all, and did his action in driving me to the station have its roots not in a desire for reconciliation, as I had thought, but in his horror of having outsiders think we had quarreled?

The thought was intolerable, and I put my hand on the door of the car with the intention of getting out again, when I felt Dicky's hands on my shoulders, turning me toward him. His eyes looked quizzically down into mine, and then, regardless of possible passing cars, he stooped, kissed me with rough tenderness, gave me a little shake, released me, and turned back to the wheel.

"You little devil!" he said, and the familiar phrase which on Dicky's lips becomes an endearing one, told me more plainly than anything else could have done that the last trace of his anger had vanished.

"Shut up!" he growled. "What do you want to spill anything like that for, even in fun? It's bad enough having you start off on this fool trip, without any idea of just where you're going, or how long you're going to be gone. No telling what might happen. I've two notions to put my foot down and say you can't go."

His voice held the gruff anxiety which makes any wife's heart leap with the knowledge that it is grounded in deep sincere husbandly affection, and I put my hand over his on the wheel in a light and understanding caress.

"I like to hear you talk that way, Dicky," I said, as I snuggled closer to him. "But that doesn't alter the fact that I simply must go and get Katie back if there's any chance of doing it. And if I can't, I'll just have to go to an agency and bring back the very best possible maid I can, regardless of the price."

"You mean the best three, don't you?" Dicky said. "I have a sneaking idea that you'll find times have changed so much since Katie came to us that it will take a quarter-dozen high-salaried, modern work-dodgers to replace her."

"Two dozen couldn't do that," I returned loyally. "So don't discourage me. Just wish me luck instead, and you'll see I'll bring Katie back with me. I don't mind telling you I'd give a good deal to hear her carol. 'All right, Meesie Graham I feex,' once more."

"I can imagine it would rival a Galli-Curci solo just about now," Dicky said. "Was that the train whistle? Police?" and he stepped on the gas, sending the car along furiously.

"It's the Sag Harbor shuttle," I said, reassuringly. "We haven't any too much time, but we're on the road that goes beneath the tracks, so we won't be delayed. I'm sure we'll make it."

"You can bet we will," Dicky retorted, and we fairly flew down the country road, reaching the tunnel beneath the tracks just as the city train dove in sight.

"Madame Will Pardon Me." "No time for a ticket," Dicky drew the car up beside the station, helped me out, and snatching my bag, ran with me to the chair-car door, and handed the bag to the porter. "Good-by, dear. Be careful now."

"I will," I promised, and felt a tugging at my heartstrings as I followed the porter into the car to the seat he found for me. There was something about this journey which depressed me unaccountably, and it took me several minutes to recover my poise. I needed something to read I decided, and I stopped to the door at Southampton, counting on the number of people who usually boarded the train at that point to give me a chance to dash to the news-stand and pick up again.

THE SNOPPYQUOP ANIMATED FILM COMPANY

Now you know how animated cartoons are really made. The artist is a Snoppyquop, consisting mainly of a bottle of ink. Ideas come into his head out of an old jug, and he draws with his finger, which is a pen. When he draws one "frame" on the movie film before him, he turns the crank and up moves another. He draws the next one a little different, and then cranks her up again. That's what's the matter with the movies, they're run by cranks. His nose throws a little light on the subject of his work, but doesn't if he sneezes, for then he blows his fuse out. He can't go on turning out work forever, either, for he's limited in ideas, ink and film.

PETER PUZZLE SAYS— See if you can solve these B-headings: Behad a stream to make a bird. Behad a flower and get a weaving machine. Behad something that sweeps and ket what it sweeps. Behad to bat the eye and get part of a chain. Behad again and get a writing fluid. Behad the edge and get a place to skate. Behad dreary and get a means of escape.

Not Necessary Mr. Smith: "Here, waiter, bring me a spoon for my coffee." Walter: "Sorry, sir, but we don't serve them—the music here is so stirring."

Answer to today's B-headings: Brook, rook; bloom, loom; broom, room; blink, link; ink, brink, rink, bleak, leak.

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Working over time— The rumor factory at the state house.

"Look to the hills whence cometh your help." They are whispering of richer strikes than ever in the Santiam mining district— saying the ore they are now getting is rich enough to carry out on horseback at a profit.

Managers of the local bakeries and restaurants are saying that they cannot get loganberries in Salem, excepting the dried ones. They say they would make more loganberry pies the year around if they could get the barreled product. How about this? With the very short crop of 1924, there should be a demand for all the loganberries, at fair prices. With the juice business put on the map again, the loganberry industry is going to come back to stay.

The state flax plant shipped another car of low from Rickreall on Wednesday. Has orders ahead for flax seed, from the drug trade, that will be hard to fill, till the seed for the growers is provided. The whippers, or threshers, will be started today, if the power connections are finished, as promised.

A Salem man suggests that when a senator goes to Washington these days his baggage should include a spyglass, a monkey wrench, a corkscrew, a searchlight, a can opener, a file, a gimlet and a pair of tweezers. Then he can probe and bore with the rest of the gang.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Mr. and Mrs. McCleave of California are visiting at the William Bouffleur home. The Valley View club will meet with Mrs. Dore Gibson of Salem on March 27. Mrs. Ben Bletz is rapidly recovering.

GAZISH FLYER, PART 2 Here is how our flyer looks when it is all set up. If you wish to make it extra fancy, paint it in some funny colors. For instance, make the plank blue, the handle-bar red, and the soap box green. The flyer is worked by putting one foot on the plank, grasping the handle-bars with both hands and propelling it with the other foot. Coasting down some hill affords the most fun. It will not be simple to try to make this gazish flyer work the first time you get on it; it will be just a little like trying to roller skate for the first time, but not quite as difficult. Get your gang together and build a whole fleet of these things and then have a tournament to see who has the fastest and best flyer. Have one race down hill, straight coasting. Have another along the level ground so that the fellows will have to run the flyers themselves. CAP'N ZYB.
