

THE DIVERSITY EDITION PRAISED

Michigan Paper Has Received a Copy From a Loyal Salem Citizen

The following news item appears in the March 27th issue of the Herald, of Manistowish, Michigan, a live paper in a live town in the center of the hardwood timber land of the northern part of that state:

"The Herald office received this week a 40 page edition of the Oregon Statesman, published at Salem, Oregon. It gives a glowing account of the natural advantages and great possibilities of the Willamette valley. It predicts that Salem will become the Mecca of America, owing to the fact that it is rapidly developing in that section. Fruit growing, dairying and general farming are set forth in a very attractive manner. The excellent educational and religious advantages are highly commended on. The great mineral wealth, too, was given a prominent place. We are indebted to W. R. Palmer, formerly of this place, who now lives in Salem, for the receipt of this splendid edition."

STAYTON NEWS

Liberty To Have New Pipe Organ

Almost coincident with the reduction in the price of admission at the Liberty theater to 25 cents for all shows comes the announcement of the management that a new organ, larger and more complete than the present instrument, has been purchased, and will be installed in the theater.

The new instrument is a Smith Unit organ, only slightly smaller than the Wurlitzer now in use at the Oregon theater, and will provide music at the Liberty equal to most of the moving picture houses in the state. Work preparatory to installing the organ is already under way at the theater and it is anticipated that the instrument will be ready for its premier by Easter.

Still, when a stubborn fit stalls on the tracks and won't start, there's some satisfaction in sitting on the bank and watching it happen.

It is better to do ordinary grafting when the sap is rising, but political graft succeeds better when the saps are dormant.

THE FERTILIZER WORK AT LABISH

Prof. Bouquet Has Commenced on His Experiments With Onions

The following special news item is sent to The Statesman from a correspondent at Oregon Agricultural college, Corvallis:

"A. G. Bouquet, professor of vegetable gardening, and Kenneth Ackley, senior in vegetable gardening, returned Wednesday night from the Lake Labish onion lands near Salem where they conducted fertilizer experiments on both set and large onions.

"The purpose of these experiments is to determine what fertilizers are best for onions raised on beaverdam soil in this particular locality. The kinds of fertilizer used were super-phosphate, muriate of potash, sulfate of ammonia and sulphur. These fertilizers were applied separately and in different combinations.

"Twenty plots totaling approximately one acre were used for these fertilizers. At harvest time the crops of onions and sets will be carefully weighed to determine the effects of the fertilizer on the yield."
