Fire Protection Film To Be Seen Here Saturday

As a part of the Forest Protection week program a two-reel moving picture film, "The Red Enemy," carrying a lesson in fire protection and produced by state foresters, the United States forest service and fire associations of the northwest, will be shown at the Salem army Saturday afternoon, April 26.

"The film is a product of the northwest," said State Forester F. A. Elliott, "and in addition to its educational value contains an interesting plot. It deals with a settler, who, disregarding the instructions of the fire warden, sets fire to his slashings with the result that he and his family and also a number of campers are trapped by the fire. Some very vivid pictures of forest fires are shown, as well as beautiful scenery from an airplane. Logging, sawmill and pulp mill scenes are portrayed.

"The film will be shown especially for the benefit of the school children, but it is hoped that many adults will be able to attend. No admission fee will be charged."
