Reckless Driving Charged—
As an aftermath of driving an automobile through the plate glass window and into the main part of the building occupied by the Fleenor Electric company on Court, Elva Amaler, 1043 South

High, was fined $10 for reckless driving when she appeared in the police court yesterday. Miss Amaler, who was driving the automobile operated by Clarence Wenger, 340 Washington, being unused to operating a motor vehicle, became excited when a man stepped from between two parked machines as she was turning around and lost control of the machine. Her companion turned the automobile toward the curb and called to her to put on the brakes. Miss Amaler accidentally stepped on the throttle instead of the brake, with the result that several hundreds of dollars' worth of damage was done to the store building.

Cohns Back From Trip—
Mr. and Mrs. Louis Cohn have returned from a pleasure motor trip through California, where they have spent the last month. Though Mr. Cohn was born near San Francisco, he was more than delighted to cross the state line back into Oregon, having become tired of the dried up territory through which he had been traveling. Oregon, with its vivid green, looked mighty good, he said. The trip was made without any difficulties and Mr. and Mrs. Cohn returned minus several hundreds of dollars and the hoof and mouth disease.

Traffic Case Dismissed—
A. W. Sandberg, 495 North Commercial, left his motor running when he left his automobile Tuesday night. The case against him was dismissed when he appeared in the police court yesterday.

Visiting From Seattle—
Mrs. Harold W. Street and small son, Harold Jr., of Seattle are visiting at the home of Mrs. Street's mother, Mrs. John F. Corner.

Pratum People Visit Prison—
In charge of Mrs. Branch, students of the seventh, eighth and ninth grades of Pratum, were visitors at the state prison yesterday. Several other of the state buildings and institutions were also visited by the party.

Are Seeking New Location—
Several parties are camped at the Salem auto park who are looking for new locations. Tourists stopping at the camp average about 20 each night, according to Superintendent Albert. A majority of these are easterners who have been spending the winter in California and who are returning home by easy stages. The real eastern tourist is not expected for another month. All of the visitors are disappointed over receiving no windshield stickers, but as these are in the hands of the printer, they will be available in the near future. An electric iron is available, there being no service charged for its use. Borrowers sign for the iron and are checked off when it is returned.

Building Permits Issued—
Two 2-story residences will be added to the long list of new properties now under construction, according to building permits issued Wednesday by Marten Poulsen, city recorder. Joseph McHargue, will build a two-story residence in Reeds addition at a cost of $2000 while J. A. Bernardi, Salem plumber, will build a similar sized dwelling at 458 South High, to cost $4500.

Wanted—

BITS FOR BREAKFAST

Watch the grape boom—
It will bring grape juice factories.

It will make Salem the West-field of Oregon, with grape juice and grape basket factories, jam and jelly factories, etc.

In the new head lettuce industry on our beaver dam lands which has almost sprung up full fledged in a season, there may be the making of big things. Head lettuce has been grown down there that might invade the big city markets of the whole country, against all comers. Lettuce crops for its great success.

If the plan to attempt to make the boys' training school self supporting is not mandatory, it is at least plainly desirable. And that ought to be mandatory enough to warrant action on the part of a progressive administration.

Did any Statesman reader have the idea that the proposition of getting asparagus canneries here was a pipe dream in the mind of the Slogan editor? Yes? Well, you watch that asparagus dream for a little while. It has pleasing symptoms of coming gloriously true.

Scotchmen have the tallest average of the white races. Our Salem barber says they may be close, but they are not short.

Japan ought to be flattered instead of peevish. Exclusion as a national policy was invented by the Japanese. It is the right of any country to exclude any body, and has been since prehistoric man in his squatting places to take on the first rude forms of organized government.

There is a Concord grape vine down on the Clyde La Follett place at Wheatland that is about a foot and a half in diameter at the fork, and that has produced 2 1/2 tons of grapes in a single year. Ought this grape vine not to have a place in the hall of fame for trees? One such grape vine would go far toward supporting a family in modest circumstances on a farm.

"God so loved the world (of men) that he gave his own son" to save. The third "world" is the age, or system, or philosophy, the perverse element that will not have the rulership of God. This is the vain glory of life, the selfishness, the hatred, the lust, of whom the Master said, "The God of this world hath blinded their eyes." This god of their own, whom they worship, is the spirit of evil that never was of the Infinite.

"You cannot have the love of God and of the world at the same time," declared the speaker. "To try to profess the love of Christ while holding fast to the other, is like the adulterous wife or husband, with a false kiss and a traitorous heart masked under a smiling face."

The speaker told a profoundly interesting story of the great Welsh revival, one of the most remarkable religious movements in the history of Christendom. She had visited at the home of the Rosses, (where it first had birth. Mrs. Ross, a stately woman, had dedicated her son Edwin to the Lord before his birth. He grew up a studious, thoughtful lad, much given to prayer. His brother, Dan, a miner, made sport of him, but one night, after seeing about the head of the silent, kneeling Edwin a halo of light such as is described having come upon the disciples at Pentecost, he gave up his tormenting, and finally asked for a prayer for himself. He was the first convict. The two brothers went through Wales like a flaming fire. Their first meeting was in a coal mine, far underground, but the movement spread into palaces, banks, factories, wherever people lived or could be found.

"You need that spirit in Salem," declared the speaker. "Salem must have the same spirit of humility and seeking after godliness that came to that Welsh miners' household, if the soul of Salem is to come to its own."

Two after-meetings were held in which hundreds of people re-consecrated themselves to the cause of the better life.

The services at the Oregon theater Wednesday noon were of high class. Director Demarest at the pipe organ gave "Lead Kindly Light" and several other hymns with all the changes that the splendid Oregon organ would provide. As some of these musical numbers are played after the sermon, the crowd disperses very slowly until the last organ note dies away.

Mrs. Demarest spoke from the theme of "Doubting Thomas," the disciple who would not believe of the resurrection until he had proven it for himself. The speaker presented the thought that the world asks to be shown the truth before it will believe the truth. The real Christian will first believe and then the physical proof is not necessary even though it may be convincing. God has brought his people through fire, and famine, and wilderness, and persecution, to prove who can be trusted. It is those who have had the great faith to see the guiding hand in all things who are the leaders, the pillars of the church that carry the church on through the ages as a living, pulsating, all-pervading fact. "He that overcometh shall be a pillar in the house of God," and the rewards of the righteous who by overcoming self and worldly things are able to be the spiritual leaders of humanity, were shown as of sublime worth.
