TO MY MOTHER

Oh, Mother, who gave me my being,
My life, and my eyes to see;
Oh, Mother, how am I to tell you
How much you mean to me?

How am I to speak of your beauty,
A beauty I always have known,
The wisdom and wonder of spirit
So silently moulding my own?

Through daybreak, and noontide, and twilight
The thought of you never leaves;
Like your own are my joys and my triumphs;
And my sorrow your own heart grieves.

Oh, Mother, my Mother, my Mother,
Though halt are the words and slow,
The love I've not told you on other days,
This day I want you to know!

Darling of N. Y. At The Grand

One of the most pleasing features of the Universal production, "The Darling of New York," starring Baby Peggy, which opened yesterday at the Grand theater, is that it is dramatically interesting without making any obvious attempt to be dramatic.

It would be less dramatic, perhaps, if it were not for the fact that the incidents around which the theme of the story is woven, concern the experience of a four-year old girl, a poor little waif who was unfortunately cast in with a bunch of crooks.
